POULTRY, CAGE BIRDS, DAIRY.

SEASONABLE HINTS.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—

The following is an excellent food for chickens or other birds intended for killing: Boil some bones and scraps of meat for two or three hours. Pour the liquor into a saucepan, with cheap, small broken rice, and boil slowly till the rice has swelled. It should not be boiled too soft, but should be rather crumbly. Mix with it some ground oats or fine oatmeal. Chickens are very fond of this, and it is both nourishing and fattening.

Unsatisfactory dealing by any advertiser in this column should be immediately reported to the Manager of the "Irish Times."

APPLE TREES.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Gardening Correspondent says:—

Apple trees appear at first sight out of the question for the small garden, yet we see a little town garden, with two standard trees, which crop exceedingly well under the restricted treatment consistently and continuously employed, and are no obstruction. In fact, vegetables are cropped close up to the tall stems without detriment to them, and the trees seem all the better for the repeatedly tilled soil. The heads of the trees are so trained to consist of ten cordon-like branches, and now fully matured are kept to it by rigorous annual pruning, which, we may add, have this season been roped with fine fruit.

WORLD'S POULTRY CONGRESS, 1930.

It is announced that the Fourth World's Poultry Congress and Exhibition will be held at the Crystal Palace, London, from July 22nd to 30th, 1930.

The Congress is being organised by the Ministry of Agriculture and Fisheries, London, in conjunction with the Board of Agriculture for Scotland and the Ministry of Agriculture for Northern Ireland, and generally under the auspices of the International Association of Poultry Instructors and Investigators. The Ministry undertook the responsibility at the request of the National Poultry Council, and on the assurance that the full support of the poultry industry would be forthcoming.

The Department of Agriculture for the Irish Free State does not appear on the list of organisers, although from the position of the poultry industry here it should certainly participate.

In addition to the important paper-reading side of the Congress, at which numerous problems affecting the progress of the poultry industry will be under discussion, there will be an international exhibition, to which all participating countries will contribute. This will consist of displays of poultry, rabbits and pigeons, together with educational and research exhibits illustrating the development of the poultry industry in the various countries, and a comprehensive trade exhibit staged by commercial interests in this country and in other parts of the world.

The director of the Congress is Mr. P. A. Francis, O.B.E., the Ministry's Poultry Commissioner. Dr. V. E. Wilkins, of the Ministry, has been appointed secretary, and Mr. J. A. McGilvray assistant-secretary.

FARM PRODUCE PRICES.

A FORECAST.

(BY R. BORLASE MATTHEWS—COPYRIGHT.)

The price of British wheat has shown a slight advance during the month owing to the small supplies appearing on the market. The average price for the month, however, is lower than for the corresponding period last year. The main reason for this reduction is the larger harvest secured this year in the Northern Hemisphere. This year's crops exceeded those of last year by eight per cent. (exclusive of Russia). The prices during the coming month will probably show a further rise.

Imported wheat has experienced an irregular demand, though the average price is slightly higher for the month. A further slight rise may be experienced during the coming month. This, however, will not be maintained, owing to the excellent world harvests. In this connection it is interesting to note that the area under wheat in Australia is 14 million acres. This is the largest area on record for that country, and is an increase of over two million acres on last year's area. The Argentine crops are making good progress, and supplies of new crop are likely to appear in December.

Best samples of malting barley have only been in moderate supply, and the best grades are commanding higher prices. Medium qualities are experiencing an irregular market, while feed grades remain unchanged. Imported descriptions are in small demand at lower prices.

Argentine maize has been in steady demand at higher prices. Shipments during the month have been small, and Continental buyers have been active. American maize prices have also advanced in sympathy with Argentine. A further rise in price will be experienced during the present month.

Oats have experienced a steady demand during the month, and prices are slightly higher. A further rise should be looked for during the present month.

The price of British made linseed cake has advanced during the month, and with the improved demand a further increase in price will be experienced.

Milling offals have met a steady demand, and prices will probably increase.

There has been a good supply of fat cattle on offer. Choice beasts sell readily at firm rates, though prices for other grades are lower.

Fat sheep have been penned in good numbers, and have met an active demand at higher prices.

Best dairy cattle have met a good demand, and prices are generally higher. Inferior grades, however, have been in less request, and recent prices have not been maintained.

Store cattle are in limited request and price changes are negligible.

A slightly improved demand has been experienced at some centres for store pigs, and prices are slightly higher.

Store sheep have only been marketed in small numbers, and prices generally favour sellers.

British butter has been in short supply, and prices are higher.

Eggs are now becoming very scarce, and prices are considerably higher at all centres.

SOUTHERN PORK TRADE ENTERPRISE.

Following an interview with the directors of the Co. Cork Farmers' Union Abattoir and others interested in the fresh pork trade in the South, Mr. F. S. Velton, Irish Traffic Manager of the Great Western Railway of England, made arrangements for improved transport facilities to the London market, especially during week-ends. The steady increase in this traffic has rendered a service of this kind essential, and to meet the demand the Great Western Railway Company, in conjunction with the Great Southern Railways Company, has arranged for a special train and boat service, by which pork leaving Cork at 2.45 p.m. on Saturday will be delivered in Smithfield Market by 2 o'clock on Monday morning. From the time the pork is crated in Cork until it reaches the Great Western Station at Smithfield, via Rosslare and Fishguard, the meat is not handled, so that it arrives in good condition. From the low level platform at Smithfield the crates are lifted to the market, where it can be readily distributed. On Saturday last a large consignment of Irish pork was sent to Smithfield Market by this route, with satisfactory results.

SIGN POSTS IN IRISH FARMING.

WHAT PRICE FIGURES PROVE.

Mr. Hogan's vigorous defence of the policy now being pursued in this country by the Government—which runs parallel with current farming practice as based on prices—would have been worth making if only because it brings the student of Irish agriculture back to certain basic facts tabulated and expounnded a couple of years ago by Mr. Thomas Barrington. No one who desires to understand Irish farming during the last two or three generations can ignore these facts. We propose now to examine them independently in brief detail, and see whether the probable trend of conditions in the near future points to any alternative plan to that propounded by the Minister to the Dublin Chamber of Commerce last week—a policy which, we may remark incidentally, has been advanced in these columns for several years. No examination of the situation can be made without figures, but we shall cite only a few. The starting point of the investigation is 1840. The base figure for that year is 100; the comparable figures given are those for 1925, the index for which is 131. A few obvious facts must be remembered so as to avoid comparisons void of value being made through failure to adjust the present to the past. In 1840 Ireland had nearly twice her present population. The purchasing power of money may well have stood at twice its present value. The standard of living of the mass of the people, with its staple dietary of oatmeal, milk and potatoes (most of these foodstuffs being raised at home) was, according to our present view of values, desperately low.

Surveying Our Price Position.

Now let us survey the agricultural price position of 1925. Eggs hold the foremost position in the table of relative increases, being just five times the 1840 price. Store cattle (one-two year olds) fetched nearly four and a half times, and two to three-year-olds just over four times the 1840 price. Other agricultural commodities come in the following descending order — Potatoes (three and one-third times), butter, hay, beef, oats, barley, wheat and wool all above the 1840 price, but the last two below the index fixed by the table for 1925 (131), and thus scarcely to be considered money-making commodities. Wool, however, does not stand alone. Mr. Barrington's figures do not cover sheep; but the mutton figure for 1925 is 269 against the 1840 (100), so that wool, when considered as a bye-product, should not be written off as necessarily unprofitable.

But the position of wheat is even worse than Mr. Hogan asserted. In only nineteen out of the eighty-two years surveyed was its price position favourable when placed against the index number. The last of these years was 1881. Fifteen of these years, it is worth noting, were anterior to the repeal of the Corn Laws. Now, to bring Mr. Barrington's figures into closer relation to farming as a money-gaining industry, they would need to be "weighted." In the absence of weighting they can only be held to mark tendencies, and to specify these tendencies clearly we would need to take some account of the difference in standards of living. In the absence of accurate knowledge, we suggest that only those price values considerably higher than 131 can be safely looked upon as a "paying proposition." So calculated, the certainly gainful "crops" are, as Mr. Hogan showed, the live stock group. Considered in themselves, butter, the three cereals, beef and (worst of all) wool, are doubtful. But butter, beef and wool are ancillary to the live stock industry, the hinge to which is in the store cattle business; and so we come (not exactly by his route) to Mr. Hogan's conclusion that the logic of fact, as illustrated by price analyses, drives our farmers to mixed farming, based on the live stock industry, and that cereals have their place in it mainly for feeding purposes.

The Lesson of the Beef-Milk Controversy.

A few points of detail will make the situation clearer. There are sometimes differences of opinion as to wheather beef or milch cattle pay better. Mr. Barrington contends that, as "the production of young animals is the governing factor in the situation," therefore "the production of milk and butter cannot be the predominant motive influencing the Irish farmer in regard to the number of milch cows now kept"; which, he points out, form a higher percentage of the total cattle than those of Britain, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, France, U.S.A. or New Zealand. His figures, however, show butter as having a slightly higher trend than beef since 1922. And as dairying also includes the value of skim-milk, and is thus ancillary to the pig industry (not included in this summary), it is at least arguable that the movement of to-day towards more extensive (and also more intensive) dairying is a growing, if not a permanent, factor in our farming economy. But, allowing for a doubt, it is clear that, whichever solution is accepted, the cattle industry continues to furnish the chief basis for our agricultural wealth. Again we reach a conclusion accordant with the main lines of policy pursued at present by the Department of Agriculture, followed by all those farmers whose farms easily lend themselves to a mixture of cattle-raising and tillage, and by some who heretofore thought their land "too good for dairying."

Searching for Alternatives.

Is there any practicable alternative to this way of looking at the Irish farmers' future as inescapably tied to cattle as the basis of mixed farming, with enough tillage (and no more) to bring him the maximum return in terms of live stock and their produce when sold at remunerative prices? It is, of course, theoretically possible to restrict imports, abandoning exports to a corresponding extent. We may keep out coal, substituting electricity, and "go out of" milking cattle beyond the number needed for the home consumption of meat and milk and butter. We can "protect" our breakfast table against the imported foods, including sugar, and, of course, cereals. No one, indeed, proposes that we should put tariffs on the fruits we cannot grow, the orange and the banana, substituting an extension of our own almost non-existent orchards and fruit gardens; but even that would be a possible policy.

The price we should pay for all this kind of protection, however, would be an impoverishment in the dietary of the townsman, and at a higher cost, as well as increased bills for clothing the town worker and also the farmer and his wife and family. We do not foresee the electors consenting to these changes in our standards of living, and, if only because of this, we consider it impracticable. In any event, there are two things we cannot do. We cannot supply an even inferior standard of necessities without some imports, and, in the absence of industrial mass production, we must purchase these by raising a surplus of farm produce which will "pay." That, as we see, means dairying or beef. Also, we cannot control prices in the international market. We cannot even influence them unless we sell our produce in large quantities of uniform and high quality.

We hear, for instance, that next year is likely to be a trying year on the British butter markets if, as is probable, large overseas imports flow rapidly in. Incidentally, this is an additional reason for giving uniform support to the joint marketing of Irish butter which, in isolated and small quantities, subject to inter-competition, becomes the shuttlecock of the market when faced with large Danish and Colonial imports. We happen to know of a large wholesale firm whose demand for Irish butter was this year multiplied several score as against the 1927 demand, because it could be supplied in relatively uniform quality through a single source.

Apart from exceptional cases, however, we are in this position: Unless Irish farming, abandoning the pursuit of the meagre wealth immediately possible, decides to espouse increased poverty as a desirable form of the "good life," there are no other avenues open than those of the sign-posts which may be found in Mr. Barrington's convincing figures. Unexpected changes in the world market may oblige us to try whether we can remove existing ramparts and prepare new roads. But to-day's choice lies between poverty and an extension of existing schemes, coupled with improved quality. We see only one direction in which an immediate change in agricultural policy may be usefully possible. We could, without protection, increase the consumption of home-produced food, and so give a fillip to farming on its present lines.

PROFIT FROM WINTER EGGS.

DUCKS LAY TWICE DAILY.

In the championship winter section of the second "Poultry Gazette" laying competition, which concluded on the 14th September last, the total number of eggs recorded was 6,060 from 102 birds, an average of 60 eggs per bird for the four winter months from October 15th, 1927, to February 15th, 1928 (124 days).

The White Wyandottes averaged 64.5 eggs per bird.

Rhode Island Reds averaged 59.2 eggs per bird.

Light Sussex averaged 46.05 eggs per bird.

The average price received for eggs for the winter period was 2s. 6.4d. per doz. The cost of feeding was £16 10s. 9d. The amount received for eggs was £64 14s. 10d., leaving a profit of £47 14s. 10d. over the cost of food, or a profit per bird of 9s. 4.3d. for the four winter months.

The entire test consisted of 56 pens of pure-bred birds, divided into five sections, and to be eligible for prizes every pen had to show an average weight of 24 ounces per dozen eggs.

The following are the averages recorded per bird for the 48 weeks:—

Rhode Island Reds	195.0 eggs per bird.
White Wyandottes	192.7 ,, ,, ,,
White Leghorns	186.0 ,, ,, ,,
Light Sussex	178.7 ,, ,, ,,
Buff Rocks	163.2 ,, ,, ,,
Barnevelders	132.8 ,, ,, ,,

The total number of eggs produced during the 11 months' test was 25,825 eggs, an average of 164.4 eggs per bird, compared with 187.73 eggs for the 1926-'27 test. The average price received for eggs for the 11 months was 1s. 11½d. per doz., compared with 1s. 11.9d. per doz. for last year.

The total amount received for eggs during the 11 months' test was £181 2s. 3½d. The cost of food, grit and shell amounted to £62 13s., leaving a profit over the cost of food at 17s. 2d. per bird.

World's Record for Ducks.

Five pens of three ducks competed in the duck section, and a total of 1,123 eggs was recorded, an average of 74.8 eggs per duck for the four winter months, value £12 5s. 6.4d. The cost of food, grit, shell, etc., was £3 7s. 6d., leaving a profit (over cost of food) of 11s. 11d. per duck.

The Khaki-Campbells average 94.7 eggs per duck.

Runners (fawn and white) average 45.0 eggs per duck.

A world's record has been put up by Mr. A. N. Dickson's pen of three Khaki-Campbell ducks with 363 eggs, an average of 121 eggs per duck in 124 days. One of these ducks laid 115 eggs without interruption, while the other two ducks occasionally laid two eggs daily.

How They Were Fed.

The birds were fed a simple but wholesome mash. Grain was fed in the mornings, and this consisted of equal parts by weight of wheat, oats, and maize. In the spring the wheat was omitted on account of its high price, and at the approach of the summer months the cracked maize was reduced. The mash was mixed to the same formula as was used last year. This was fed wet and dry. The dry mash hoppers were open before the birds practically all the time. In the early afternoon the soft mash was fed of the same "Test" mixture, and the birds got as much of it as they were able to eat. In the cold evenings in winter it was found that a little kibbled maize was readily eaten up. This was placed in the food troughs just before the birds went to roost.

GROWTH OF EXPORT PORK TRADE.

Speaking before the Ports and Harbours' Tribunal in Dublin, Mr. J. M. Adams, of the Department of Agriculture, stated that the export trade in fresh meat—pork, lamb, mutton and veal—had been increasing in volume rapidly during the past two years. The British embargo on fresh meat (including pork) from any place in Europe, except Ireland, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man gave Ireland the opportunity to recapture the British market by the adoption of the most up-to-date methods of killing, dressing and packing, and by speeding up, where possible of the transit of the meat to the markets. There was, however, still need for a transit service to reach the Smithfield Market four or five hours earlier than at present. He gave the following figures, illustrating the growth of the trade, notwithstanding the handicap of late arrivals in the market in the past two years:—

Exports from the Irish Free State.

In Cwts.	1925	1926	1927	Twelve months to Aug. 31/28
Beef and Veal	3,250	5,232	19,255	52,186
Mutton and Lamb	1,499	411	15,152	18,472
Pork	4,165	27,353	132,593	165,387

The trade in pork, it will be seen, in the last twelve months period was forty times that of 1925 and six times that of 1926, and it is now two-thirds of the total fresh meat export.

MACHINERY FOR THE FARM.

CAN IT BE IMPROVED?

Speaking before the Farmers' Club in London on Monday, Mr. J. R. Bond, M.Sc., M.B.E., Agricultural Organiser for Derbyshire, made some useful remarks on the future development of farm machinery and the possibility of making improvements which may reduce the cost of producing farm commodities. In the course of his remarks he said:—

Milking Machines.

That the modern milking machine is efficient and an effective labour-saver is now beyond dispute. That, with proper care, it is an aid to clean milk production has been shown by the results of clean milk competitions. Whether its adoption is advisable in any given case, however, depends on the circumstances of the particular instance. On a grass farm it enables the maximum number of cows to be kept with the minimum of hand labour. On a mixed holding, however, the labour necessary for other operations may be utilised also for milking; and in winter, when field work is limited in time and opportunity, the work of hand-milking may be profitable employment.

Nutlet Machines Wanted.

As regards the tending of cattle in buildings, mention may be made of the value of electric light as an aid to efficient workmanship, and as an amenity which those who have to milk and feed cows on dark winter mornings greatly appreciate.

As regards food-preparing machinery, there is little new to record concerning grist mills, chaff-cutters, cake-breakers and root-cleaners and slicers. These machines have been widely adopted, even on small farms, since the introduction of the small internal combustion engine. The chaffing of straw for litter where straw is scarce is becoming a common practice; chaffing not only increases the absorbtive properties of the straw, but it also saves labour in the distribution of the manure in the field. Possibly there is room for a machine that would enable the farmer to make up his feeding meals into nutlet form. The convenience of having feeding stuffs in nutlet form is obvious; and if home-grown and home-ground corn could be put up in this form it would also solve the problem of feeding a balanced ration to cattle fattening on rich grass.

Haymaking.

Perhaps the best example of the development of machinery to suit changed conditions of farming is the modern equipment for cutting, making and carrying the hay crop. In this series of operations the scythe, the hand rake and the fork (manipulated sixty or seventy years ago by a large and augmented staff of labourers) have been replaced or supplemented with a group of machines which enable the present reduced staff of regular workers to harvest an increased acreage of hay in a shorter time and often at less cost per acre than in 1850, when wages averaged only about one-third of their present rates.

It is not necessary to detail the merits of the last addition to the series of haymakers—the side-delivery rake; but it is noteworthy that whereas in some districts this machine is regarded as the most useful of all the hay field appliances, it is little known in other parts. The adaptation of the tractor for mowing is a development that calls for mention because of the fact that it quite doubles the output per man in this particular operation, which had already been vastly accelerated by the invention of the horse-drawn mower.

Manure distributing, mole draining, turf slitting and hedge cutting are other operations of special interest to the occupier of grass land, which afford scope for the use of machinery. The dung spreader is now an efficient machine and answers well to the needs of the dairy farmer who pursues the ideal of spreading the manure daily as produced. It is not so useful to the arable farmer, however, who leaves the dung in his cattle yard until the end of summer and then wants to concentrate his teams on the work of carting it out; his greatest need in this work is a mechanical device for loading the manure into the carts.

Manure loading is made more laborious and expensive by the use of carts with high wheels and high sides. I have calculated that reducing the height of the cart by 18 inches would cut down the physical effort of loading by about 25 per cent., and theoretically could save about 2s. per day in this operation. There is certainly a case for the adoption of lower-set vehicles.

Turning to machinery for the cultivation and harvesting of arable crops, the main problems lie in the treatment of potatoes, sugar beet and fodder roots, all of which make heavy demands on the farmer's labour resources. In fact, the acreage of these crops cultivated on any given farm largely determines the labour necessary for the operation of the entire holding, or the labour available for the farm as a whole determines what acreage of any of these crops shall be grown.

As regards the harvesting of cereals, perhaps the first need is for devices which facilitate the cutting of laid crops. The conventional binder-sails or reel is comparatively useless when the crop is lodged, and the self-binder is of least service when weather conditions have delayed harvesting operations. It should not be difficult to design something working on the principle of a swath turner which would pick up the grain and turn it over towards the knife.

The value of separate motive power for the working parts of the binder is recognisable when the machine has to work on soft ground, where the bull wheel tends to slip. The saving of horse power is also appreciable, for when dealing with heavy crops on soft ground binder work is very exhausting to the team. The fitting of a small air-cooled engine for this purpose was demonstrated some ten years ago; another device applicable to tractor operation is the use of two electric motors; a third is that of transmitting the motion of the engine to the binder through a revolving shaft.

With regard to methods of cultivation in general, we cannot avoid the feeling that our ploughs, harrows and cultivators achieve the desired ends by very indirect methods. Rotary tillage is an attractive idea; but, apart from assisting the market gardener and fruit grower, it has not yet found a place in British husbandry. Probably the plough will always be preferred for autumn and winter use; but the rotary method should be found valuable for tilth production in spring. One conceives of the ideal tractor as a machine capable of roto-tilling as well as ploughing and hauling by cable. Possibly the tractor will also lend itself to the working of a machine capable of actually extracting and collecting running weeds at one operation. At present, the nearest approach to a machine of this kind is the potato digger.

The present tendency in tractor ploughing is towards the use of the one-way implement attached to the tractor in such a manner as to permit of the motor being backed or otherwise manœuvred into position.

G.A.A.

CLOONAGH AND THE CENSORSHIP.

NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN.

REPRESSION OF THE UNFIT.

(By D. M. LARGE.)

THE effect of all this talk about evil literature and morally injurious publications has been to make the Cloonagh people wonder why so few of these have ever come their way. Some years ago a copy of a "Sunday hair-raiser" did, by some error, find its way to the little village, on the Thursday following the date of publication; but Mrs. O'Toole, wife of the newsagent cum grocer cum ironmonger, noting the date, and presuming that a newspaper of that age could legitimately be used for household purposes, set fire to it in order to singe the chicken she was, even then, preparing for the pot. "I was like never to hear the end of it at the time," she says now; "for himself hadn't led an eye upon it at all." Having heard recently, however, of the unsuspected iniquity of the paper in question, she invariably concludes with the words, "Mebbe it was all for the best."

There are those in Cloonagh who would hold Mrs. O'Toole up as a shining example to all morbidly curious people, but she is honest, and steadfastly refuses to be "praised in the wrong." "Sure, I didn't know a ha'porth about it," she protests, "only that I looked at the date an' seen that it was five days old, and I massacreed the pin feathers with it while you'd look around you, and right enough it burned up terrible smart—didn't I remark it at the time?"

AN OLD IDEA.

The idea of a censorship of literature is not a new one to Cloonagh folk, though, of course, the plans now being made in this connection are on a much larger scale than any of which they have had experience. Twenty years ago, in the comparatively quiet times that preceded the European War, the first dark days of November saw the establishment of a Mutual Improvement Society by a certain section of Cloonagh's citizens, with an ambitious programme of parliamentary debates on such vexed questions—very fully answered since then—as "Does Germany intend to go to war with England?" The opening and closing entertainments were concerts, and there were lectures by local lecturers on subjects ranging from "My Trip to Switzerland," illustrated by lantern slides—mostly upside down, though hurriedly righted when the mistake was pointed out to the manipulator, who, apparently, never looked at the screen—to "Bee-keeping for Profit," illustrated by badly swollen stings.

In connection with this society there was a small library, gladly patronised by those eligible for membership, as well as by the large circle of non-subscribing friends to whom they, in turn, lent the books. The method of choosing the volumes was an excellent one. A library committee having been formed, every member submitted a list of twelve novels that he, or she, judged to be worth reading, either by reason of the author's name or of an appreciative critique read somewhere or other.

BROWSING IN BOOKSHOPS.

From the complete list of seventy-odd titles the necessary forty were culled; and the purchasing of these was entrusted to a high official of the society much addicted to reading, who journeyed to the city and spent a rapturous day browsing in book shops, with the altogether delightful realisation that the books he bought only cost him his subscription to the library. Of him it was said by Cloonagh's jobbing gardener, who expected to be helped by the employer in whose garden he chanced to work: "I might be labourin' there with me two ends in the ground till the vapour would be risin' off of me, an' what would he care so long as he was jig be jowlt wid some ould book or another?"

As a rule, these carefully chosen volumes proved to be interesting without being injurious, and up-to-date without being revolutionary; but now and then a book crept in among the forty that the conscientious buyer, having dutifully perused it when he got home, deemed to be unfit for inclusion among the other novels. Such a book was sternly repressed without ever having been circulated, and the subscribers to the library were forced to content themselves with the meagre explanations of the merciless critic.

NOT THE SAME THING.

"I put it in the fire," he said simply of one censored volume; but this was not as correct as he thought it to be; for he had really given it to his wife to put in the fire, which should have been the same thing, but was not. She, naturally, wanted to see what it was that had so horrified her husband, and, failing to find anything that, in her opinion, could do the reader the slightest moral injury, she thought it only right to pass it on to the person who had suggested it to her as a likely title—until, as so often happens, the banned volume was read by many people who would have passed it by had it been circulated with the rest. However, no harm was done, as to this day nobody has succeeded in finding out where the danger of the book lay in the eyes of the censor.

In Cloonagh, therefore, folk regard the Censorship Bill with an indulgent, proprietary air, as pioneers must look upon those who follow the trail they have blazed. Some have been heard to express the hope that it will interfere with the liberty of the public as little as did their own censorship twenty years ago.

Bandon.

A correspondent writes:—Your paragraph on the young playwright, Mr. Percy Robinson, made me wonder if he will be as lively in his old age as was his grandfather. That old gentleman, at the age of ninety-seven, walked into a shop one day and jumped over a counter just to show his agility. My father happened to be a witness of the incident, and used to relate it with astonishment. All Bandonians are Methuselahs in embryo, so they have time to become clever. There are still portions of the old walls of Bandon standing. Down near the river one can climb up on to it and walk on a broad pathway between the walls.

Few people know, I fancy, that a daughter of the poet, Edmond Spenser, a Mrs. Wiseman, lies buried in the churchyard of Kilbrogan Church in Bandon. Her father wrote "The pleasant Bandon, crowned with many a wood." The Bandon is still there, but, alas! the woods are gone.

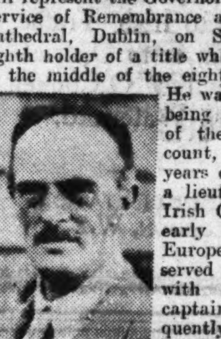
Viscount Powerscourt, K.P., M.V.O., who will represent the Governor-General at the Service of Remembrance at St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, on Sunday, is the eighth holder of a title which was created in the middle of the eighteenth century.



LORD POWERSCOURT.

He was born in 1880, being the eldest son of the seventh Viscount, and when 21 years of age took up a lieutenancy in the Irish Guards. In the early part of the European War he served in Gallipoli with the rank of captain, and subsequently saw service in France and Belgium. He was placed on the retired list in 1918.

Lord Powerscourt has held many important public appointments. In 1906 he became Comptroller of the Household to the Earl of Aberdeen during the latter's Lord Lieutenancy, and in 1910 was appointed H.M. Lieutenant for County Wicklow. Since 1921 he has been a Senator of the Southern Parliament.

Lord Powerscourt, at his residence at Powerscourt in County Wicklow, has one of the finest private collections of paintings, including examples by Tintoretto, de Witte, Nasmyth, Solomon, Moroni, Fra Filippo Lippi, Vernet, Morland, Zucchero, Jansens, Mireveldt, Emanuel, Parocel, and Sir Thomas Lawrence.

British Legion Delegate.

Major-General Sir Sydney Crookshank, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.I.E., D.S.O., who will represent the British Legion at the Service, is the son of the late Colonel Crookshank, a well-known officer of the Indian Army.

General Crookshank joined the Royal Engineers in 1889, and joined the staff of the Indian State Railways in 1892. He was promoted to the rank of captain in 1900, and a few years later became Under-Secretary in the Government Department of the United Provinces.

He gave valuable service during the European War, being mentioned in despatches on seven occasions. He was promoted temporary lieutenant-colonel in 1915, and two years later received his colonelcy.

Following the war he took up a Government Secretaryship in India, and from 1921 to 1923 was a member of the Legislative Assembly. He had command of the Simla Rifles for a few months, and from 1925 was Chief Engineer of the Southern Command.

The Londonderry Air.

Mention in the "Diary" of "The Londonderry Air," now more familiar through the popular song, "Danny Boy," reminds a correspondent that Mr. Edmund Curtis, the historian, has written a delightful little Gaelic song, "Maidean i mBearra," to this beautiful music.

Sir Charles Stanford's "Irish Rhapsody No. 1 in D minor," in which the air is given in full by a master musician is a great favourite with Sir Landon Ronald, the famous conductor and composer. Ronald first heard it conducted by Stanford himself at Norwich about twenty years ago. In pre-war days he conducted the "Irish Rhapsody" in the chief musical centres on the Continent, and two years ago he won enthusiastic praise for it from music-lovers at the Opera House, Monte Carlo. The critics in Berlin, Vienna, Leipzig and Amsterdam were every whit as charmed as the audiences.

Mr. T. Wibberly says that when he played it at one of William Ludwig's concerts in Strokestown, Co. Roscommon, in 1904, nobody in the audience had ever heard it before. Mr. Wibberly had learned it nearly half a century ago from his mother, who had learned it from her father, and it is thus at least a hundred years old. It was lilted without words, he says, by Irish migrants in Lancashire. Even before the Famine exodus many Irish people had gone to Lancashire, and it is likely enough that they took this air to England with them a century ago.

Salmon Fleas.

I have just heard an amusing story from a little fishing village in the North. A lady who was staying there saw a tiny shop in the main street, which had a large placard in the window bearing the legend: "Salmon Fleas sold here." Amused by this misprint, she entered the shop, and got into friendly conversation with the owner. After a while he told her the secret of his sign. "Forty gentlemen and ten ladies have come in here to point out my mistake," he said, "and not one of them left without buying something."

Sunshine Homes.

The Electricity Commission, which met last week in the University of London, under the chairmanship of Sir John Snell, held its conference on light and heat in medicine, surgery and public health. One of the most important exhibits was a model clinic, showing how the benefits of artificial sunlight are brought within the reach of those who, by the nature of their work or the necessity of living in overcrowded districts, are suffering from the effects of light deprivation.

This reminds me that the little Sunshine Home in Stillorgan, which is doing such valuable work among the poor children in the Dublin slums, is about to make an appeal to the public to help the committee to carry on the hospital. Many slum children suffering from rickets have been permanently cured by the treatment given in the institution, but now the Home finds that the little sufferers must be refused admission for want of funds. Miss Overend, the energetic secretary of the Home, has been in consultation with those who are promising assistance in the campaign to bring the sunshine to the little ones calling to her for this happiness, and I am sure her appeal will not be in vain.

The sunshine treatment has the support of all the prominent medical men of our day, and Dublin has been one of the cities where artificial light has been used with marvellous results, especially in the case of the suffering children.

"A Rash Escapade."

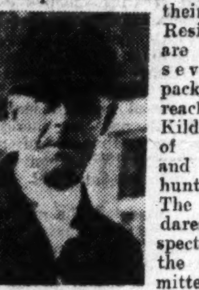
A correspondent writes:—As I was walking over College street crossing last Monday evening about five o'clock I was horrified to see a very small boy on a scooter scooting up Westmoreland street at full speed, in and out of motor traffic, alongside the trams, occasionally touching the ground with one foot to get up greater speed, and then on like a hare.

Little did he think of the awful risk he was running. I breathed a prayer that he might get through safely, and as a 'bus was on the turn into College street in front of me I had to watch my step. When I turned to see where the little fellow was he was out of sight.

If this meets the eye of that boy, it is hoped he will take the advice of an old stager and not do that trick again.

"The Killing Kildares."

The Irish hunting season has started in earnest, and by the end of this week most of the packs of foxhounds will have held their opening meets.



COL. BLACKER.

Residents in Dublin are lucky in having several first-rate packs within easy reach of town. The Kildare Hunt is one of the best-known and most sporting hunts in Ireland. The "Killing Kildares" have a respectable antiquity, the first hunt committee having been formed as far back as 1812, and even before this date the famous Squire Conolly of Castletown kept a pack of hounds in the county.

The Kildare Hunt has been fortunate in having had a history of the hunt written by the late Earl of Mayo. It is a pity that so few of the other historic packs of Irish foxhounds have found sporting members with literary taste to "write up" their respective county packs.

I hope that the "Killing Kildares" will have a good season's sport under the auspices of Colonel Blacker, D.S.O., who carries the Master's horn this year. The Kildare Hunt has been celebrated in verse, and I append the chorus of a hunting song written over fifty years ago—

Bravest of men are the men of Kildare,
Though fortune prove fickle they never despair.
Would you still wear your laurels I'd have you beware
How you ride to our hounds when you come to Kildare.

Sweet Crabs.

A correspondent who recently tramped across the Three Rock Mountain tells me that in a field half-way up on the Stepaside side he noticed several crab apple trees still laden with fruit. The crabs were fairly large, and out of curiosity he tasted one. To his surprise it was rather sweet and juicy. It seems that when crabs get a touch of frost they acquire quite an agreeable taste. Crab apple jelly is, of course, delicious, though very few of our ultra-modern Irish housewives bother to make it.

A Fisherman's Haunt.

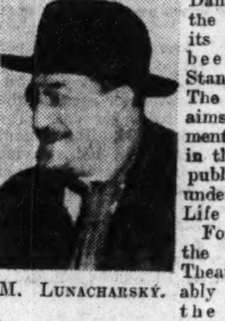
Sunday afternoon in winter offers a great temptation to settle down in a comfortable armchair in front of the fire and sleep off the effects of a plentiful repast. But a good brisk walk would be better for most people, and there is no better place for an invigorating walk than the West Pier at Kingstown.

The West Pier is very different from its fellow on the East, and, in my opinion is much more interesting, besides being less artificial. One does not, it is true, walk upon a smooth concrete pavement, but the feel of the honest gravel under one's heel is not reminiscent of the city footpaths.

Fishermen favour the West Pier and many of them frequent the end of the breakwater. I saw some of them there recently complacently smoking as they watched their rods and lines. Judging by the amount of time spent on catching one decent sized fish, I should think that the catch must be worth its weight in gold.

The Moscow Art Theatre.

This week the Moscow Art Theatre is celebrating with considerable ceremony the thirtieth anniversary of its opening. The theatre was opened in October, 1898, largely through the efforts of Constantin Stanislavsky and the novelist Nemorovitch Danchenko, and for the greater part of its existence it has been directed by Stanislavsky himself. The record of his aims and his achievements may be found in the book which he published last year under the title "My Life in Art."



M. LUNACHARSKY.

For most people the Moscow Art Theatre is inseparably connected with the discovery of Anton Tchekov as a dramatist; indeed sometimes the theatre itself is called "The Seagull" after Tchekov's play, and from the design of the seagull which is used as a kind of trade mark, and which is worked upon its drop-curtain.

The programme for the anniversary celebrations includes numerous addresses from well-known Russian writers, including M. Lunacharsky, Soviet Minister for Education, and a dramatist of considerable repute on the Continent, and the publication of tributes to the work of the theatre from dramatists, actors and critics in all parts of the world. Performances are to be given of excerpts from the most important plays in the theatre's repertoire, including "Hamlet" (with the Gordon Craig setting), "The Brothers Karamazov," "The Seagull," "The Cherry-Orchard," "The Lower Depths," and "The Powers of Darkness."

To mark the anniversary the Soviet Government has assigned life pensions of about £30 per month upon the two founders of the theatre, Stanislavsky and Danchenko. Thus it will no longer be necessary for Stanislavsky to tour the world with his company in search of a livelihood.

Beet Sugar.

It is a far cry from Carlow, where the beet sugar factory at this season is working at high pressure, to the sleepy provincial town of Ham on the Somme. But the gap was bridged for me the other day by a copy of a pamphlet advocating the claims of beet sugar to protection from the pen of no less a personage than the third Napoleon. This was one of the numerous publications with which Louis Napoleon occupied himself during his imprisonment at Ham by the Government of Louis Philippe after his inglorious failure at Boulogne in 1840. Beet sugar might seem a strange theme to inspire a prince in captivity, but Louis Napoleon had a hereditary interest in the industry, which was established in France by the first Emperor to replace the Colonial sugar cut off by the British blockade following the Berlin decrees.

I was interested to see that Louis Napoleon put forward all the main arguments urged in the Dáil in support of the Free State scheme, laying particular stress on its value in providing work in rural centres. Beet sugar seemed to attract politicians of that period. If I remember aright, Cavour in his early days was not only an enthusiastic propagandist for the industry in Italy, but was himself an extensive grower and manufacturer.

Shankill.

Shankill may not yet have attracted the attention of the jerrybuilder, as a correspondent pointed out in the "Diary" recently, but it has certainly attracted the attention of the summer camper. One receives rather a shock on leaving the station, to find a large field immediately adjoining covered, in the summer months, with all the paraphernalia of the camper; such as tents in various stages of collapse, pots and pans, soap boxes supporting tin basins for washing, towels and bathing costumes, bicycles, not to mention unconventionally attired members of both sexes, while the strains of gramaphones and banjos keep the neighbouring residents awake far into the night.

QUIDNUNC.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

ARMISTICE DAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—In your announcement in to-day's Irish Times of the arrangements for the Remembrance Day parade in the Phœnix Park next Sunday you say that it is anticipated that the attendance will be greater than ever. You publish also a letter from the Primate of the Church of Ireland, the Moderator of the General Assembly and the President of the Methodist Conference, drawing the attention of the clergy of their Churches to what they consider "that it would be fitting for them on that day to emphasise in their sermons," and to the need for generous support from their people for the appeal made on behalf of Earl Haig's Fund for wounded soldiers.

It is evident that, the larger the attendance of members of these three Churches at the Remembrance Day parade in the Phœnix Park, the smaller the attendance will be at the forenoon Services in the Dublin churches, and the smaller the support given to the Earl Haig Fund. We think the proper place for those members of these three Churches, who are not on parade next Sunday, is in their customary place of worship. The more we honour God in His own house, on His own day, the better do we yield Him praise and thanksgiving for our deliverance from those great and imminent dangers wherewith we were encompassed, and for His gracious gift of peace.—Yours, etc.,

THE FREE STATE CENSORSHIP BILL.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The idiocy of humanity obviously knows no limit, but the text of your proposed Censorship Bill adds yet another clause to the axiom. If any nation produces a debased imbecility in thought or legislation, some other nation will follow it. Imitation is not a quality of apes, but of men.

A few of your voters might reflect on the effects of the American censorship laws before sinking to the level of their perpetrators.—Yours, etc.,

"THE KING OF TERRORS."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Your readers cannot fail to be most grateful to you for your report of Sir Berkeley Moynihan's address on the subject of cancer. He said: "If we can replace ignorance by knowledge in the minds of men, we shall banish the fear they have of cancer." He then proceeded to show that it was only when the disease was treated in its early stages that a final cure might be expected. We have heard this stated again and again when the treatment of the disease was under discussion; but, so far as I am aware, we have never been told how the disease indicates its presence in its early stages, and surely this is the knowledge that is most necessary for the ordinary individual. How can one look for treatment in the early stages of the disease when one may not be aware of its presence until it is so far advanced that treatment may not be effectual?

I am quite aware that there may be a very great number of ways in which the disease acts, according to the organ that may be attacked, and that it would not be possible to describe all the early indications of the disease. If, however, Sir Berkeley Moynihan or any other cancer specialist would tell us in simple language some of the symptoms of the early stages of the disease, to enable us to look for treatment when it is most likely to be effectual, he would be entitled to the deepest gratitude from all, and especially from those who are no longer young, as it seems that the aged are more susceptible to this "king of terrors."—Yours, etc.,

WHAT MR. SYNGE DID NOT SAY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—Lest your readers might suppose that I did, in fact, say all the things imputed to me in your report of my address to the Dublin University Experimental Science Association, perhaps you would be kind enough to note the following, which I thought were all sufficiently clear in the typed copy which I gave to the Press:—

(1) It was a "notation," not a "rotation," that the Arabs learned from India.

(2) Printing was invented in the fifteenth century, not in the thirteenth.

(3) I did not say that our forefathers learned the process of scientific thought from the Egyptians.

(4) I did not say that intellect in the Free State was attracted towards science. On the contrary, I said that intellect was attracted towards literature rather than towards science.

(5) I did not express a wish for a means of giving appointments "without intelligence tests"; I said, "without ludicrous intelligence tests." There is a difference.—Yours, etc.,

THE PEMBROKE TRAM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—As a resident in Pembroke, I learn with regret that the Pembroke tram is being diverted to the Donnybrook line. Surely this is a very short-sighted policy on the part of the Tramways Company, as this tram was very largely patronised, being on the only direct route from Pembroke to Baggot street. I hope that the company will reconsider the matter, as, in view of serious 'bus competition, it would be their interest to convenience the public in every way possible.—Yours, etc.,

PARLIAMENTARY INTRUDERS.

CATS AND DOGS IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

BOY WHO DESIRED TO MAKE A SPEECH.

(By JOHN MANNERS.)

THE black cat which found its way into the House of Commons, and, to the amusement of members, perched itself sedately on an arm of the Speaker's chair, was the latest of many "four-footed strangers" that have invaded the sacred precincts of the House.

Few, however, have had the honour of being introduced by a member of the Cabinet, as was the proud privilege of a Persian kitten which found its way into the House, one day in 1719, in the capacious pocket of Mr Secretary Craggs. Puss, however, was in no mind to hide his charms even in a Cabinet Minister's pocket, and, creeping out, made his way sedately across the floor towards the division lobby. This was an indignity not to be tolerated, and the debate was suspended while grave and honourable members tried to capture the intruder. When pussy was at last caught and claimed by the Secretary of State, the House, we are informed, "burst into peals of laughter."

On another occasion, on November, 1830, a stray cat had the audacity to walk up the floor of the House and jump on to Mr. Speaker Sutton's knee; and a third Parliamentary pussy once listened gravely to a debate, sitting at the feet of Mr. Speaker Peel. Once, at least, a dog took an unlicensed part in a debate on Warren Hastings, and punctuated Sheridan's eloquence with barks of approval until it was summarily ejected. A rat scurried across the floor of the Commons towards Mr. Speaker Abercromby, who, in his fright, actually climbed for safety on to his chair, amidst the irreverent cheers of the House. On other occasions a crow and a canary have invaded the House, the former at least, without "caws."

GARRICK SMUGGLED IN.

Of human intruders there have been many strange samples. Once, in 1835, a Scotch Highlander, in full national costume, boldly took his seat on the right of the Speaker's chair. A few weeks later another Scotsman, also in full regalia, dissatisfied with his seat beneath the gallery, took a comfortable position in front of the iron rail, where he remained unconcernedly for a couple of hours. During the Duke of Wellington's premiership, a country parson passed the janitor in the House of Lords, took his seat solemnly among the peers, and on leaving, appropriated the hat of the Iron Duke himself.

In 1777 David Garrick, the actor, was smuggled into the Commons, and great was the ire of certain members, when his presence was detected. A worthy Shropshire squire grew white with indignation at the impropriety of admitting a mere play actor to "our proceedings," and demanded his expulsion. It would have gone hard with Garrick if Burke had not appealed to the House "to treat Mr. Garrick with decency, if not liberality, and not to exclude a man to whom they were all obliged, in whose school they had all imbibed the art of speaking, and been taught the elements of rhetoric, to whom personally he was so much indebted for instruction." Fox and Townsend seconded this eloquent appeal, and the result was that Garrick was left in undisturbed possession of his seat.

A CHILD REMOVED.

When Lord John Russell was Premier and leader of the Commons, a small voice was heard from the ladies' grille exclaiming, "Oh, mammy, dear, there's papa." The house was delighted at the unconventional interruption, but Mr. Speaker directed the Serjeant to go to the ladies' gallery and "request the lady in charge of the squalling bairn to leave the gallery forthwith." The Serjeant-at-Arms asked the Speaker whether he should ask the name of the lady or the name of the father of the bairn. The Speaker replied that he left that to the discretion of the Serjeant. Thereupon the late Mr. Bernal Osborne jumped up and said: "A wise child knows its own father; it is Lord John Russell's baby." The House roared with laughter at this sally, while the Serjeant went on his errand and presently the innocent offender was removed.

A similar incident occurred more recently, when another childish treble was heard in the ladies' gallery piping with glee: "There's daddy, mamma!" The hon. gentlemen were greatly tickled, and laughed at the novel interruption. Not so the officials, who, as custodians of the strangers and the responsible controllers of order, were greatly shocked. Inquiry resulted in the discovery that the voice was that of Mr. John Dillon's three-year-old. It appears that the wife of the Irish ex-leader went to the House with her little boy, and they were granted seats in Mr. Gully's private cloister. No sooner had they seated themselves than Master Hopeful manifested an irrepressible interest in the proceedings. Of course, when he began audibly to address the Chamber, the attendant requested Mrs. Dillon to use her influence, and on the arrival of the Speaker's private secretary the wife and child of the member for Mayo left the gallery; but on his way out the infantile Demosthenes opposed their departure by saying: "I want to make a speech, mamma; I want to make a speech." The boy's brightness and ardour were so winning that everyone who witnessed the scene was delighted with Master Dillon.

A BRAY HOTEL.

When Mr. P. J. Meghan, B.E., Commissioner for Bray, sat for the transaction of municipal business at Bray on Tuesday the Town Clerk stated that the endeavour to get the International Hotel taken over by the Great Southern Railways Company had not succeeded. Mr. A. Towell, manager of the company's hotels, had replied that they did not think the company's acquisition of this hotel would be in the interests of the directors.

NATIONALISM AND PEACE.

IRISH LANGUAGE AS A TEST.

"Nationalism and Universal Peace" was the subject of the address delivered by the Auditor, Mr. Herman Good, B.A., LL.B., at the opening meeting of the 45th session of the Solicitors' Apprentices' Debating Society, held last night in the Engineers' Hall, Dawson street, Dublin. Mr. Basil Thompson (President of the Incorporated Law Society) presided, and there was a large attendance.

Mr. Good said that nationalism might be regarded as that free, unrestricted, living force binding people together in a bond of common interest and common territory, and it was the object of his address to endeavour to prove that the recognition of that living force was the necessary foundation for world peace and world happiness. It had been held that nationalism was the root cause of the Great War. That the fact or sentiment of nationalism was the most predominant feature in the war could not be denied; neither could it be denied that the British Empire entered the war in defence of the principle of nationalism as outraged by the German invasion of Belgium, and in defence of British national honour. But it was wrong to assume that nationalism itself produced war.

It was diseased and corrupted nationalism—pride, ambition, selfishness, inordinate lust of power—that lay at the root of every war. The alleged irreconcilability of nationalism and peace did not exist. On the contrary, nationalism was, and must be, the only effective instrument that could bring peace to the nations of the world. Could it for a moment be imagined that even under the dominion of a world Power eternal peace would reign, unless the dominant Power came to terms with the spirit of nationalism among the subject peoples, as Rome did, and as Great Britain had done with the Irish Free State?

THE CASE OF IRELAND.

To show how a keen sense of nationalism in a country could, if wisely directed, be employed to secure peace for that country, no better or more illustrative example need be sought than that of Ireland. Ireland had, indeed, forced the world to think about the problem of nationalism, and the experience of the Irish people would, for all time, be invaluable to the nations of the world, would help to solve other national questions, and thus help to bring about a universal peace. During seven centuries of turbulent history the moral fibre of the Irish people had, without question, been weakened and their virility had been impaired. Every effort was made to rob the Irish people of their most precious heritage—their nationalism—that living force which bound them together in an indissoluble bond of common land, common language, common tradition and common interest.

Every conceivable means was employed by the dominant nation to wipe out the tradition of the Irish people. The dominant nation at last realised that, although it could deprive a weaker nation of its many martyrs, it could not rob it of its consciousness, or of the conviction that it alone was the rightful possessor of the soil of Ireland. The Irish people, amidst trials, fought for their independent existence, fought to keep alive the spirit of Irish nationalism, and they won. To-day the Irish nation, with self-government, was making every endeavour to intensify its sense of an upbuilding nationalism and to give its contribution to the progress of humanity. The national organisation in the Irish Free State was day by day becoming more and more powerful, more elaborate, more firmly established, richer in experience, more energetic in action—was, indeed, becoming the producer of the culture of the Irish people.

THE LANGUAGE QUESTION.

One of the most potent factors in the life of a nation was the preservation of its language, and although a great effort was being made in many directions in this country to revive the Irish language, the mass of the people had yet to contribute its share in that undertaking. A dying tongue could not be revived without first touching the chords of the national sentiment. They should sacrifice a little time and energy to bring about a complete revival of a language which, with its rich literature, could play its part in the cultural progress of the world.

So long as Ulster remained outside the Pale of Irish nationalism and refused to join hands with the rest of Ireland in the building up of the country on a firm and solid foundation, promoting Irish industries, fostering the Irish language, encouraging Irish endeavour, and creating a true Irish atmosphere, so long would nationalism never be the instrument in securing peace for the whole of Ireland. It was urged that the differences between Ulster and the rest of Ireland were religious differences. Although the majority of the Ulster people were of a religion different to that of the majority of the people living in the Free State, that could not truthfully be said to be the real cause of dispute between the two. Religion, it was true, might be the cause of a great deal of enmity and hatred, but that it should constitute the root-cause of a national partition was hardly conceivable.

What, then, was the cause of the split in this country? "The only valid cause," said the Auditor, "is the complete lack of a sense of Irish nationalism in Ulster. The people of Northern Ireland have not yet thrown off the yoke of subserviency which fettered them for so many hundreds of years. They have not, as yet, realised that the whole island is the heritage of the Irish nation, and that Ulster—but a part of it—has no organic life of its own, has no nationality of its own, and hence, within the meaning of nationalism, cannot cut itself off from the rest of Ireland. The truth is, a sense of Irish nationalism has yet to be born in the six counties. The people there have yet to become free. They are in need of a strong will, an intense desire, and a sound national appetite. And as the nationalism in the Irish Free State is becoming the instrument of peace in that country, so it will become the instrument of peace for the undivided Ireland as soon as the people of the North become imbued with a love of their land, their people and their language."

The Chief Justice, Mr. Hugh Kennedy, K.C., proposed a vote of thanks to the Auditor. He said that the address had been characterised by a great deal of thought. He would not venture to engage with the Auditor in examining the reasons that impelled Great Britain to take part in the Great War. It was not peoples who embarked on war, but it was statesmen who brought peoples into wars. On the question of language, he wondered that more regard was not paid to the example that might be held up to the Irish people of the revival of their language by the Hebrew people. If there was to be a revival of the Irish language, it could only be revived by the co-operation of the people—by the people really wanting it; and, if they wanted it, it was because they felt a real consciousness of their own nation and race. "If," he added, "the people have become so provincialised and so de-nationalised that they do not want it, then the day of freedom has come too late." He believed that the real test was whether we would earnestly and sincerely revive our own language, in which were enshrined our own traditions, and which enabled us to live our own lives along our own characteristic lines.

Mr. Vincent Rice, K.C., T.D., seconded the motion. He said that to justify our claim to be advancing it was not enough to say that we were developing our distinctive national traits; we must also claim to be advancing along the roads of material and social progress. He did not accept in their entirety the Auditor's remarks about Ulster. In examining the cause of the present attitude of the people of Ulster they must remember the history of Ulster and that Ulster was the land of the Plantation. But things were changing, and he did not despair in our lifetime of seeing Ireland united. He thought that the foundation of our future union must depend on our advancement towards the social and material prosperity of this State, of our making it worth while for the people of Ulster to join us; and he thought that they were making some progress in that direction. The other thing—and we were making even more progress in this—was that we must satisfy the people of Ulster that they would get with us equal rights and justice. When they had built up the prosperity of this State, he believed that Ireland would unite for the common good.

Professor W. Magennis proposed, and Professor Binchy seconded, a resolution to the effect that the Solicitors' Apprentices' Debating Society was worthy of the support of the solicitors' apprentices of Ireland, the Council of the Incorporated Law Society and the solicitors' profession.

The following medals were distributed:—

Oratory—Law Society's gold medal, Herman Good; silver medal, Edward Treacy.

Composition—Law Society's gold medal, Daniel J. O'Connor.

Legal Debate—President's gold medal, Herman Good; silver medal, Robert F. Coonan.

Impromptu Speeches—Vice-President's gold medal, Herman Good; silver medal, Brendan T. Walsh.

THE LATE MR. GEORGE W. PANTER.

BOOK-LOVER AND COLLECTOR.

Mr. George W. Panter, M.A., whose death was recorded yesterday, was well known in Dublin, particularly for his interest in the antiquities of Dublin, and as a collector.

He was born in Dublin, his father having a successful painting and decorating business in Leinster street. At Trinity College he was something of a character, and a few years ago there were many who remembered his reputation as a leader of student exploits of various kinds. He, himself, related with great gusto his reminiscences of those days—the tricks played on Fellows and tutors, the "rags" on fellow-students, and town and gown encounters. He and a colleague passed within the police cordon at the burning of the Theatre Royal by representing themselves as reporters. That was in 1880, the year in which he was Junior Moderator. At that time, too, he had some reputation as a boxer.

A few years later Panter left Dublin, and acquired business interests in England. Having prospered, he established a beautiful home here at Foxrock, and began to make his house, The Bawn, Foxrock, a treasure-house of books and objects of artistic and antiquarian interest. He formed a very fine collection of pictures and prints of old Dublin—perhaps the best collection in existence. He also collected antique Irish silver, miniatures, and engravings of famous Irishmen, and Irish medals.

RARE EDITIONS.

More important was his assemblage of books in first and rare editions, chiefly relating to the eighteenth century. He had the first edition of one of Burke's first books, "A Vindication of National Society," and a unique copy of "The Deserted Village," supposed to be a pirated edition of the first issue. Another prize was a rare first edition of "She Stoops to Conquer," with Diggory missing from the names of the dramatis personae, and with this he kept a copy of the corrected first edition.

Best of all was his collection of Swift documents and relics—rare and excellent specimens of the Dean's publications, and also books that had belonged to Swift, containing his own marginal notes and entries. He had a big collection of the pamphlets, but did not claim it as complete, because he found that it was impossible to be sure which among the many pamphlets printed as Swift's, or reputed to be his, really were his work.

Always attending sales and probing the stocks of dealers, about the end of 1918 Mr. Panter heard that the bell of St. Senan, a relic of great archæological and Irish interest, was in the London sale market. Expressing, in his usual boisterous manner, his wrath at such a treasure being put to the risk of leaving Ireland, he himself bought it at Christie's for 1,250 gns., and presented it to the Royal Irish Academy. This is the bell, or more properly "bell-shrine," reputed to have dropped to St. Senan "from Heaven, ringing loudly," on a hill near Kilrush. It was supposed to be of 10th century origin, and was for centuries in the possession of the O'Cahans (O'Keanes), who were the hereditary lay stewards of the Scattery Monastery, founded by St. Senan.

Mr. Panter was a Fellow of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland, President of the Bibliographical Society of Ireland and a member of the Royal Irish Academy. A few years ago, at the request of the late Provost Bernard, Mr. Panter represented Trinity College, Dublin, at a festival of commemoration of the establishment of the University of Padua.

In the period of disorder in 1922, Mr. Panter's house was visited by a gang of ruffians, who then were living in the Dublin hills, and preying on the residents of the adjoining country. Shots were fired, and a cabinet containing valuable objects was broken.

YESTERDAY IN DAIL EIREANN.

A CONGESTED DIVISION LOBBY.

OPPOSITION AND GOVERNMENT ARM IN ARM.

COURAGEOUS MINORITY OF FIFTEEN AGAINST COMPULSORY IRISH.

After a resumed debate lasting an hour and a half—from 9 p.m. until 10.30—Dail Eireann yesterday passed the second reading of the bill making Gaelic obligatory on legal practitioners.

Only fifteen deputies voted against the measure, while 110 representatives of the various parties flocked into the "Aye" lobby.

Six Government members had the courage to vote against the bill, but Mr. Hogan, the Minister for Agriculture, was not among them, despite his outspoken speech during the debate. Eight of the twelve Independent members and Mr. Coburn of the National League, also figured in the minority.

Dr. Hennessy, the Government representative for Dublin South, made a very effective speech against the bill.

After resumed debate, the Civic Guard estimate for £483,373 was carried by 79 votes to 53. The Minister for Justice strongly denied allegations of political bias in the force.

Mr. de Valera and his colleagues—with one notable exception—opposed the vote of £7,400 for Haulbowline Dockyard because they were not satisfied that the Government was handling the question of the island as efficiently as it should do. The vote was carried by 83 votes to 55, Mr. Corry, the Fianna Fail member for East Cork, swelling the Government majority by one.

A WASTE OF TIME AND MONEY.

THE OBSESSION OF A GAELIC STATE.

The debate on the second reading of the Legal Practitioners (Qualification) Bill was resumed at nine o'clock.

Mr. COBURN (National League, Louth) said that, assuming that solicitors and barristers had a competent knowledge of the Irish language, there was no provision in the bill to ensure that the judges should have a competent knowledge of the language, so that there might arise the extraordinary position of a solicitor conducting his case in a language not understood by the judge on the bench. It was provided in the bill that the Chief Justice was to be the sole judge as to whether a person who qualified for the legal profession had a competent knowledge of Irish. There was no provision in the bill to secure that the Chief Justice himself would have a competent knowledge of the language. Taking it as a whole, he thought that the bill was a waste of time, and the means of an unnecessary expenditure of money—money which the Government should be slow to expend when it might be used for better purposes. He understood that the amount of money being spent on the restoration of the language amounted to £500,000.

Mr. BLYTHE, Minister for Finance, said that the amount was not half a million; the sum was more like one-tenth of that.

Mr. COBURN said that he was glad to hear that. He believed that it would be more in the interest of the language if this bill had not been introduced.

T.D.'S NOT REPRESENTATIVE.

Mr. A. HASLETT (Indpt., Monaghan) asked if any deputy in the House could get up and truthfully say that his constituents were clamouring for this bill. He believed that the bill was premature by five or ten years.

Dr. WARD (F.F., Monaghan) said that the knowledge that this bill had every prospect of becoming law was a matter of great satisfaction. It could not be proved that Irish lawyers would not be allowed to practise in England because they knew Irish. He hoped that the time would come when a knowledge of the national language would be an essential lest for membership of that House.

A HINT FOR THE HOUSE.

Dr. HENNESSY (Govt., Dublin S.) said that he did not see why those administering the law should be compelled to learn Irish, while the law makers were not required to have that knowledge. If it were made compulsory for candidates for the Dail to have a knowledge of Irish in six months, he would have a good deal of sympathy for the proposal in this bill.

Mr. MULCAHY — There is no analogy between that and the proposition in the bill.

Dr. HENNESSEY—I know there is no analogy for anything that hits ourselves—that is the happy way we have of disposing of awkward proposals.

Continuing, he said that they had been told that the professions wanted special consideration. They wanted no special consideration; they only wanted to be treated on a level, say, with any trade union. Would any of them in that House pass a bill stating that before any apprentice to any trades union got his finishing certificate he would have to show a competent knowledge of Irish?

They were told that the State had conferred monopolies on lawyers and doctors. He would like to know what these monopolies were. To became a doctor, or a lawyer, or a solicitor, if a student was resident in the provinces, he would have to start at the age of fourteen or fifteen years, and by the time he got through his course it would cost him £1,500. So far as he knew the professions, he thought it was a very bad investment—(hear, hear)—for the return they would get, he added. There was nothing in the monopoly argument. The reason the professions enjoyed the monopoly was that there was no other body to take their place.

He had heard a lot about a competent knowledge of Irish. It would take three years of study for a student to get a knowledge which would do justice to his clients in the law courts. That was where the camouflage came in.

AN EXAMINATION SCANDAL.

They had been told about the standard in the National University, and that about the same standard would be required for the lawyers. He knew National University graduates who had passed their Irish examination, but when they were up for a position and got an elementary examination in Irish they did not get half a mark—(hear, hear)—nor did they complain about the appraisement of the examiner. If that was not real camouflage it meant that Irish would be a serious study, and, in the circumstances, he could quite understand medical students—and lawyers, for that matter, but especially medical students—going to England and spending their £1,500 to get qualified there, and at the same time cultivating the customs and business habits of the country in which they expected to live. If they made Irish compulsory it would be a further incentive to people to leave this country.

They had heard a lot about the effect of the study of Gaelic on other subjects, but on examination of the Intermediate pass lists he found that a boy who had got 1,600 marks and had six honours had failed in an examination because he had failed in Irish, while another boy who had got 700 marks and only one honour, and had failed in English, and had no Greek, or Latin, or French, and failed in history and geography, had got a pass because he had passed with honours in Irish! How was Gaelic such a wonderful study if it gave these results?

There would be no need for compulsory Irish if the Irish people were keen on it, but were they keen on it? He noticed in the Language Fund collection on the previous Sunday that not one person in fifty would pay a penny for a flag which was being sold outside the churches.

ONE-WAY GAELIC MINDS.

He knew there were Gaelic enthusiasts with one idea, and that was to make this a Gaelic-speaking country, and who hoped the hated Saxon tongue would disappear. He had been told thirty years ago that they would see such a state of things in ten years, but it had not happened, and he was growing very sceptical.

He would not care to see the English language abolished in this country. He would be candid, and say that they would lose a great deal. It was in English that Robert Emmet spoke; it was in English that Wolfe Tone spoke, and it was in English that lawyer Philpot Curran spoke—the most imperishable lessons in Irish patriotism had been spoken in the English tongue.

There was one thing he did not like to see. There was too much of the jack-boot and the mailed fist hurled at deputies on those benches. He would like to say a little about partition. He believed that some of them did not want to have the unity of Ireland. They were not going about it in the right way; and if they were thinking about those people in the North of Ireland, he would remind the House that those in the North looked upon this compulsory Irish as almost a religious test, and they said: "If the people in the Free State do that with Irish now, what would they do when they got us in?"

There was nothing in the point about emigration, as emigration went on from the greatest countries in the world.

The mentality of this country had been strangled by the bandying about of certain shibboleths—"West Briton," "Slave Mind," "Shoneen," "Traitor"—"Well," concluded Dr. Hennessy, "I hope that Heaven, if it was only for a week-end, would spare St. Patrick, to do with these shibboleths what he did with the serpents." (Laughter.)

FORTY-NINE SPEAKERS.

Mr. CONLAN (Government, Roscommon), who had introduced the measure, in concluding the debate, said that forty-five deputies had spoken on the bill.

The SPEAKER—Forty-nine. (Laughter.)

Mr. CONLAN (continuing) said that Deputy Cooper had started the hare that they were guilty of discourtesy in not consulting the Incorporated Law Society or King's Inns. Had they put their proposal to these bodies they might have been answered with an accusation of abominable impertinence or colossal cheek, or told to mind their own business. They did not want to place themselves in that position; but, if the principle of the bill were acepted, they could go to these bodies as acting for that House. No hardship would be inflicted on either profession, because they were quite prepared to meet them and discuss any amendment considered desirable, provided, of course, that the principle enshrined in the bill was not interfered with. The Incorporated Law Society had Irish as an optional subject for twenty-five years, but the success that programme attained was certainly an argument in favour of the bill.

MORE URGENT THAN UNITY.

In regard to the contention that unity was more urgent than the restoration of the Irish language, he did not agree with that. He regarded the restoration of the language as the more urgent, for if it was not saved by this or the next generation it was likely to be lost for ever. The unity of Ireland would come, and was bound to come, but it could wait longer than the urgent need for the revival of the language. Economic conditions could be made such as to encourage the people of the North to come in. They should look back at the origin of things that brought them together in that House and the hardships they had inflicted, rightly or wrongly, on the people of the country, so that they might be there discussing the affairs of the State. The principal object they had in view was to make this a Gaelic State, and in introducing that bill they were carrying out the policy in mind since before 1916.

He would not like that it should be necessary to bring in such bills for other professions, but that other bodies in the country should regard that bill as a finger-post—as an indication of what was expected by the people of this country. Ultimately, he believed, the younger generation would thank them for passing that bill, and so obliging them to become proficient in their native language.

When the motion was put it was declared carried, and Major Cooper created some laughter by demanding a division with the customary Irish word "Votail."

On a division the second reading was carried by 110 votes to 15.

CIVIC GUARDS AND POLITICS.

FIANNA FAIL RENEW THE ATTACK.

Resuming the debate on the estimate for the Civic Guards,

Mr. KENT (F.F., Cork E.) said that the amount of £1,588,373 demanded for the upkeep of the Guards would come chiefly from the pockets of the farmers, who had experienced one of the worst harvests for some years. He agreed that the Guards were a fine body of men as regards physique and intelligence, but he thought there should be a reduction of the force in rural districts.

Mr. SHAW (Government, Longford-Westmeath) said that the Civic Guards were a living tribute to the memory of the late Minister for Justice, who was responsible for their successful establishment. He warmly repudiated a statement contained in a recent question, that an officer of the Civic Guard actively aided Cumann na nGaedheal in County Westmeath at the last general election.

Mr. M. J. KENNEDY (F.F., Longford-Westmeath) agreed that the number of Guards should be reduced in the country.

Mr. HEFFERNAN, Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Posts and Telegraphs, said that none of the deputies on the other side who had cried out for economy was able to advance a single reason why as much as one pound should be taken off the vote. He believed that they had a police force equal to any force in the world, but they must not regard that force as above criticism He had always felt that the police force had certain of the imperfections of a new force, raised as it had been from the ground upwards; but, taking into consideration the circumstances in which it had been recruited, he thought that they could heartily congratulate themselves and the officers in charge of the force on the wonderfully effective body they had produced.

There had been a lot of talk about reducing the force, but personally he had doubts whether the Minister could justify himself in saying that the normal conditions of the country were such that the force could be reduced. They had not yet developed that sense of civic responsibility and sense of the necessity for maintaining law and order which was a guarantee that they could carry on with a smaller police force, and until that day arrived it would be too soon to consider a reduction of the force. At the same time, they should not regard the present existing strength as stereotyped or permanent. The responsibility of inculcating the necessary civic spirit lay with the Fianna Fail Party.

ARMISTICE DAY.

Mr. COONEY (F.F., Dublin N.) asked if the Parliamentary Secretary was prepared to use his influence during the coming week-end to prevent imperialistic displays in the city, which would entail extra duties on the Guards, and whether he would refuse to wear a poppy.

Mr. JOSEPH X. MURPHY (Ind., Dublin County) asked the Minister for Justice to let them know what were the instructions issued to Guards and 'bus drivers with regard to the speed at which 'buses could be driven. The legal limit was 20 miles, but, according to a reply given by the Minister at question time that day, the Guards were not to prosecute unless 'buses exceeded a speed of 25 miles an hour. Were the 'bus drivers to take it that there was really no speed limit?

Dr. HENNESSY (Govt., Dublin S.) suggested that the Minister might include in the duties of the Civic Guard duties other than police duties. To his mind, they would be admirable as health inspectors, rate collectors, and inspectors under the National Health Insurance Acts. He did not want any of the present officials dismissed, but, as vacancies arose, they should be filled by members of the Civic Guard.

Mr. MULLINS (F.F., Cork W.) opposed the vote, and said that there were too many barracks. There were certainly too many Guards. The Guards were a splendid body. He had found them, in the main, courteous and obliging on every possible occasion, but there were, as in every flock, certain black sheep, and it would be well that the Minister should get rid of those. There was an item for maintenance and running expenses of £1,440 last year for transport outside the City of Dublin. That item was accounted for mostly by the political activities of this force. During the past few days there had been a wholesale series of raids, searches, and holds-up all through the twenty-six counties. In his constituency some of the raids around Bantry commenced last Saturday and did not finish until Monday. The houses that were raided were all houses of the executive officers of the West Cork Committee of Fianna Fail. The district was a peaceable one. The Bantry Town Commissioners passed a resolution protesting against provocative action of members of the C.I.D.

The C.I.D. were the cause of a tremendous amount of friction in the country. They were an undisciplined force armed with guns; and guns in the hands of undisciplined men, especially in this country, were very dangerous things. They would never have civic spirit in this country until Ireland was free, but there was no reason why a genuine effort should not be made to secure popular support for the police in the execution of their lawful duty. But lawful duty did not not include keeping a "tally" upon the activities of prominent Republicans or actions such as had made the name of the C.I.D. stink in the nostrils of every decent Irishman.

Mr. J. DALY (Government, Cork, E.) said that his experience of the Civic Guards was that they discharged their duties impartially.

Mr. M. O'REILLY (Fianna Fail, Meath) said that as far as he knew the Civic Guards had conducted themselves with honour and credit in his constituency, but the C.I.D. appeared to be a body of men without any responsibility, and there did not seem to be any control or authority over them.

Mr. CORKERY (Fianna Fail, Cork, N.) said that the Guards were not a national force, but a purely political force, and served no useful purpose. The majority of the Guards were all right, but there were too many of them.

"AGENTS PROVOCATEURS."

Mr. KERLIN (Fianna Fail, Dublin, S.) suggested that the members of the C.I.D. had gone out of their way to create trouble and maintain political unrest throughout the country. Since their formation the activities of the C.I.D. had been political. He suggested that certain people had been employed by the C.I.D. to get young men into trouble by selling parcels of guns, and organising raids and escapes from prison. Almost invariably when the young men were assembled to carry out their orders they were met by a squad of C.I.D. men and arrested. On other occasions young men suspected of being attached to the Republican organisation were instructed to attend at the detective headquarters, Pearse street, Dublin, and were offered employment or money if they supplied information desired by the C.I.D. On these occasions the C.I.D. went so far as to threaten these men with arrest for various criminal offences which had taken place throughout the city.

Mr. O'DOWD (F.F., Roscommon) protested against the manner in which raids were carried out by uniformed Guards and C.I.D. during the last week-end.

Mr. F. CARNEY (F.F., Donegal) asked the Minister to deal definitely with the raids which had taken place all over the country. Were they due to a brain storm in the force or the order of a central authority?

"THE MEN IN THE MOON."

MINISTER ON CRITICS' INNOCENCE.

Mr. FITZGERALD-KENNEY, Minister for Justice, said that one of the characteristics of the debate was vague generalities, that they had too many barracks and too many men, and that the barracks were not properly placed. They had no real criticism of the estimate itself. The expenditure had not been criticised. Granted that the number of men in the force is necessary, it was obvious that great skill and care had been shown in the expenditure.

The arguments of Deputy Little and others seemed to be that the Guards were not to be properly housed because there were numbers of people in the country who were improperly housed; and that they were not to be properly clothed because there were numbers of unfortunate people in the country who were not properly clothed. Why was this vicarious charity to be carried out at the expense of the Civic Guard only? Why did not deputies set an example themselves?

Dealing with the cost of the Force, he said that the total cost of the Royal Irish Constabulary for the year 1918-19 was £1,902,623, to which had to be added the sum of £167,248 for Dublin Metropolitan Police, making a total of £2,069,871 for that year, of which £2,065,000 was actually expended. In 1919-1920 the total grant for the two police forces was £3,340,592, of which £3,242,045 was actually spent.

Mr. LEMASS—Can the Minister say how much was spent on ammunition?

Mr. FITZGERALD-KENNEY—No, I could not. The Black-and-Tans did not come until the next year, but I can give the Deputy the figures. In 1920-21 the actual total expenditure was £5,967,101, and the amount expended on the D.M.P. was £336,765.

COSTS COMPARED.

If the Saorstat, said the Minister, was now policed to the same extent as it was policed by the R.I.C. and paid at Royal Ulster Constabulary rates, the estimate would be increased by £600,000. In other words, by cutting down the number of police and reducing the scale of pay, they had reduced the cost of policing the Saorstat by about £600,000 a year.

Mr. CARNEY—Is it a fact that we in the Saorstat are responsible for a big proportion of the expenditure on the R.U.C. by payments to those who formerly belonged to the R.I.C. and are now in the R.U.C.?

The MINISTER—We are paying nobody in the R.U.C.

Mr. CARNEY—Does the Minister state that definitely?

The MINISTER—Yes; the Government of the six counties bear the entire cost of the R.U.C.

As to the argument that the Guards were paid on a higher scale than those in England, he would like to point out that the scale of pay in England was the same as that paid in Northern Ireland, and it was very much higher than that paid in the Saorstat. The rates were:—

FREE STATE.

Guard, 60s. to 83s. weekly.
Sergeant, 87s. to 98s. weekly.
Inspectors, £280 to £300 per annum.

NORTHERN IRELAND.

Constable, 70s. to 95s. weekly.
Sergeant, 100s. to 112s. 6d. weekly.
Head Constables, £310 to £355 per annum.

Dealing with the number of stations, he said that there had been a considerable reduction. He wanted to say clearly and definitely that any person in the Free State who considered that he had been aggrieved by anything done by any member of the Guards had the Courts of the country open to him. If a Guard committed an assault upon any individual he was as much liable to punishment as any other member of the community. The authorities of the Guards had never condoned any illegal acts of members of the force; but when charges were wrongly brought against them in that House he (the Minister) always repudiated such charges, and would continue to do it. As far as he could he would not allow that House to be made a place in which slanderous charges could be made without their being contradicted.

Several deputies, said the Minister, had talked about a particular branch of the Force. He wanted to say definitely that there was in the Free State only one police force, every member of which, without exception, was charged with the duty of detecting crime whether they wore plain clothes or uniform. The detective branch were well trained and disciplined, and were as honourable men as any others in the community.

THE MEN IN THE MOON.

About the raids which took place recently, one would really think that the deputies on the opposite benches lived up in the moon, and that they did not know what was happening in the world.

Were the deputies opposite ignorant of the fact that there was a considerable number of dangerous and desperate men in this country who were ready by force of arms to attempt to upset the Constitution, and who in order to carry out their design were willing to stop at nothing?

Were deputies ignorant of the fact that within the last two years unfortunate Civic Guards had been shot dead in their barracks, and that one of the most appalling crimes in the history of the country, or of Europe, was committed in Dublin a little over a year ago, when a Minister of the Free State was foully murdered?

Did they not know that there was a considerable number of men in this country who were anxious for an opportunity to indulge in crime again?

He did not believe that there was a single deputy in the House who was blind to the existence of this state of facts. It was the duty of the Guards, the duty of both branches, to see that conspiracies of that nature should not be allowed to go ahead, and that the crime of murder should not be committed in this State. Deputies opposite had asked him for information that might be at his disposal concerning these matters. He would not disclose such information, and he was not going to help criminals.

Mr. F. CARNEY (F.F., Donegal)—Does the Minister insinuate that I am a criminal?

INFORMATION REFUSED.

Mr. FITZGERALD-KENNEY—I do not. I would not have information circulated for the information of the deputy I am satisfied that any man who was raided by the Guards must have been raided because he was connected in some way with persons who were known to be dangerous. When you associate with known dangerous men you come under suspicion, and even Deputy Mullins might come under suspicion if he spent his whole life in their company.

In reply to Mr. Murphy's question as to the speed of 'buses, the Minister said that persons driving at a speed beyond 25 miles an hour would be liable to prosecution. He entirely repudiated the suggestion that the Guards had employed agents provocateurs.

Mr. SEAN T. O'KELLY (F.F., Dublin N.)—You do employ them, and I will prove it. We know them.

Mr. BRISCOE (F.F., Dublin)—Did you employ Harling?

Mr. FITZGERALD-KENNEY said that the only thing that was stated about Harling at the inquiry was that he asked somebody to take away a typewriter that he seemed to have a claim to. He thought that, from the history of that case, Harling's name would be the last that deputies opposite should mention. An attempt was made to murder him.

Mr. BRISCOE asked if Harling did not attempt to start a boy scout movement while he was employed by the Government.

Mr. FITZGERALD-KENNEY—I have no recollection of anything of the kind occurring, and certainly if he did that he would be acting extremely wrongly.

Mr. BRISCOE—That was stated at the inquiry, but Harling was not dismissed.

A NON-POLITICAL FORCE.

Mr. FitzGERALD-KENNEY, continuing, said that he was very glad that, with few exceptions, genuine appreciation had been expressed of the Guards, and of the work they were doing, by all parties in that House. It was absolutely wrong to suggest, as had been suggested, that they were political. The policy of the Government Party was that the Guards should not belong to one side more than another. That desire had been proved by the action of the Executive Council in disfranchising the Force. That was in order that the Guards would not be partisans or adherents of any political party, but that the Force, as a Force, is impartial was pretty well established and well known.

On a division, the estimate for £483,373 for the Civic Guards was carried by 79 votes to 53.

HAULBOWLINE.

FUTURE OF DOCKYARD IN DOUBT.

On a vote of £7,400 to complete the sum necessary for Haulbowline Dockyard, Mr. J. BURKE, Parliamentary Secretary, said that the buildings, wharves, machinery, etc., on the island represented an immense capital outlay, which, if there was any great industrial revival, might become a great asset. In these circumstances, the Government elected to put in a care and maintenance party to preserve plant and buildings, and for the execution of such Government work as could be economically undertaken there.

Mr. G. BOLAND (F.F., Roscommon) asked for information as to the £10,000 for maintenance, out of which there was £9,900 in wages for the staff. In his opinion, the dockyard was simply being kept for one purpose, and that was, when the exigencies of the moment required it, to hand it back to the British.

Mr. FLINN (Fianna Fail, Cork Borough) wanted to know whether that asset was being kept in condition by the Government so that when the opportunity came it could be realised. So far as he could see, it was not obvious on the face of the estimate that that was being done, and, therefore, he would like to know exactly how the bill for wages was made up; who was living on the island and did they pay rent for the houses they occupied, and for whose benefit and for what purpose in relation to the country was the ferry service maintained to the island.

Mr. ANTHONY (Labour, Cork Borough) said that apparently Deputies Boland and Flinn considered that as the dockyard was uneconomic it should consequently be scrapped. He did not subscribe to that view. There were eighty-nine workers at present employed in the dockyard. As to the suggestion that it was being kept as one of the outposts for England, these suspicions were so frequently heard that they were becoming nauseous. He rejected these insinuations. His grievance was that the dockyard did not get sufficient work, and he would like the Parliamentary Secretary to state the future policy with regard to the dockyard which, he believed, with very little expense, could be converted into the most up-to-date dockyard in these countries. A regrettable feature of the present conditions was that much of the machinery and plant had been dispersed. They had been told that it would be converted into a factory for the manufacture of wireless parts and accessories, but that election promise had not been fulfilled. (Laughter.)

Mr. MOORE (F.F., Wicklow) referred to the number of oil companies operating in the Free State, and asked had the Government approached any of them with a view to renting the oil tanks at Haulbowline or taking steps to start an oil refining industry.

Mr. BURKE, Parliamentary Secretary, in reply, said that all the energies of the Government were directed to dispose of the place, if at all, to advantage. The only firms that the place held attraction for were ship-building or ship-repairing firms. They had got rid of some redundant machinery, as they secured a better price that way than by selling it as scrap. They had also carried out a certain amount of salvage work, and were doing some ship-repairing.

As to the oil tanks, they had a total storage capacity of 17,000 gallons. Three were let, but at the moment there was no prospect of any firm taking them for such a proposition as mentioned by Deputy Moore. The Government's whole object was to lease these premises on favourable terms, and to that end they had been in communication with Messrs. Ford, but that firm decided that it was too far away from their present plant.

Mr. BOLAND asked was he still wrong in suggesting that the British Government had a lien on the property.

President COSGRAVE—Absolutely none.

HOW TO AVOID INFLUENZA AND OTHER INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

"Purify the blood and keep it pure or the poisons will soon lower the vitality and disease-resistance, thus rendering you easy prey for the dangerous germs which lurk in the air everywhere," says medical man.

Advises drinking alkaline medicinal water for quick results. Gives prescription for easily preparing it at home. Flushes the kidneys, stimulates the liver and thoroughly washes out clogged intestines. These latter breed blood poisons as a swamp breeds mosquitoes.

A famous specialist of international reputation recently said that a person with really pure blood has little to fear from influenza or other infectious diseases. The germs of these are in the air constantly, and to avoid any chance of exposure to them is practically impossible, but the blood, when pure, of course, has the power to resist their development and render them harmless, otherwise no one would be immune.

Impure blood means poor health always, for this vital fluid is the body's only source of nourishment, and when loaded with impurities it cannot carry nourishment at the same time. Such a condition should be avoided with the utmost care just now, or corrected as soon as possible if it already exists. Delay may quickly lead to depressed nerves, deranged vital organs, and lowered vitality, which reduces the body's disease-resistance to a point so far below the danger line as to render anything from a common cold to pneumonia not only possible at any time, but even probable.

Liver irritating cathartic drugs or bowel convulsing purgatives are not what you need to purify the blood. They are likely to weaken and upset the digestion, to impoverish the blood, and so make matters still worse. To obtain quick and satisfactory results in a perfectly harmless way, get a small supply of Alkia Saltrates from any chemist. Dissolve a level teaspoonful in a tumbler of water and drink this pleasant tasting medicinal water once or twice a day. It will quickly be absorbed into the blood, and when being filtered out again by the kidneys it takes with it all the acidulous or other impurities which it has absorbed and neutralised while in the blood. Alkia Saltrates also washes out the intestines, gently stimulates the liver, and thoroughly flushes the kidneys. Trying to get rid of blood impurities in any other way, merely wasting time.

Try these PORT-TYPE WINES at our risk

By trying EMU Wines—at our risk—you will discover how to get a better wine for less money.

You will get a wine which is better than most Ports sold at 5/6—for 4/6. A shilling a bottle is worth saving.

* * *

If you enjoy a glass of good Port you will be delighted with EMU 333 (Rich Ruby)—EMU 444 (Rich White)—and EMU 999 (Rich Tawny). The only difference between these wines and a good Port is the name—and the price.

They are made like Port, look like Port and taste like Port; but they cannot be sold as "Port" because of the Treaty with Portugal.

But, what's it matter about the name so long as you get the quality? And particularly when you save a shilling a bottle into the bargain!

If these wines came from Portugal they would cost you at least 5/6 a bottle, but as they come from Australia they are only 4/6 a bottle.

The difference of 1/- is paid partly by the Australian Government in the form of an Export Bounty and partly by reason of a Preferential Duty. Get a bottle from your Wine Merchant to-day.

Australia's choicest wines of PORT TYPE

You will be agreeably surprised with the splendid quality of EMU Wines—with their fine character and full strength.

Try a bottle of EMU 333—EMU 444—or EMU 999.

If after drinking a glass-full you do not like it, return the balance to your dealer who is authorised to refund the 4/6 in full. Could we make a fairer offer?

FINANCIAL

London Stock Markets were uncertain. A burst of strength followed American buying on Hoover's victory, but prices eased later. Many Industrials, however, improved.—(Page 10.)

Loans were again stringent in Lombard street, 5 per cent. being freely paid for fresh money. Renewals were at 4 per cent. Discount rates were, if anything, easier.—(Page 10.)

Dublin Market was brisker. Bank issues were firm and higher. B.A.T. fell and "Imps" rose sharply.—(Page 10.)

Mr. Hoover's Victory.

Mr. Herbert Hoover has been elected President of the United States by an unprecedented majority of votes. From the beginning the success of the Republican candidate was virtually assured; but nobody believed that the Democratic candidate, Mr. "Al" Smith, would suffer such a crushing defeat. There are 531 seats in the Electoral College which elects the President, and it seems that Mr. Hoover has secured 444 of them as against Mr. Smith's 87. Out of the forty-eight States in the Union no fewer than forty declared themselves in favour of the Republican. The only States that remained faithful to the Democratic candidate were Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Mississippi, South Carolina and Rhode Island. Mr. Smith' poll is the lowest that ever has been recorded by a Democratic candidate in the presidential election. Even his own State of New York, of which he has been Governor on four occasions, deserted him for Mr. Hoover, although in New York City Mr. Smith had a majority of nearly half a million votes. The "Solid South," which ever since the Civil War has been loyal to the Democratic Party, also went over to the enemy, and in the Middle West those States which were expected to show a majority in favour of Mr. Smith have proved to be almost unanimously Republican. There has been a landslide with a vengeance; the forces arrayed against Mr. Smith were too strong, and the result of the election shows beyond a doubt that the great mass of the people of the United States is firm in its Republican faith.

Three main causes may be said to have contributed to the rout of the Democratic candidate. In the first place, the Republican Party could point to established facts, whereas the Democrats only could make promises. In the second place, Mr. Smith made no secret of his dislike of prohibition. The women—over twenty million of whom have votes—seem to have been almost unanimous in their support of the Republican Party's prohibition policy; and the entire "boot-legging" community, which depends for its livelihood on the maintenance of the prohibition law, threw its powerful weight into the scale against Mr. Smith. Finally, Mr. Smith is a Roman Catholic. Some of his opponents made scandalous capital out of this fact, and, so far as the religious issue is concerned, Mr. Smith emerges from the campaign with a far more creditable record than the Republicans, who did not scruple to pander to the narrowest religious prejudices. Thousands of persons who would have voted for Mr. Smith if he had been a Protestant supported Mr. Hoover. The fear of an ultramontane Administration must have been very real when the Southern States abandoned their traditional democracy.

What manner of man is this son of a Quaker blacksmith, who, like Lincoln, has risen from a log cabin to the White House? Descended from eighteenth century settlers in Iowa, Herbert Hoover became a mining engineer, went to Australia as representative of a London firm at the age of twenty-three, and, having worked for some years in China, rose rapidly to the head of his profession. At the age of forty he was one of the best-known mining engineers in the world. He had offices in London, San Francisco, New York, Melbourne and Shanghai, and, when the war broke out, was living in London, well on the way to high fortune. Then came his great chance. He occupied the first months of the war in voluntary work for American citizens who were stranded in Europe. While he was engaged in this task a Belgian, who had known him in China, came to London and asked him to take charge of the Belgian Relief Committee. Mr. Hoover there and then abandoned his private career, and devoted his whole time to this work, the success of which was due almost entirely to his remarkable genius for organisation. After the war he organised relief work throughout Europe, and when he went back to the United States to become Secretary of Commerce in Mr. Harding's Cabinet in 1921, he was one of the outstanding figures in world affairs. Now he is President of the United States, pledged to carry on the traditions of the Coolidge Administration, and, therefore, to maintain a policy of aloofness from European affairs. Yet he understands Europe's problems as no other American knows them, and in this fact the old world may find an augury of hope.

Traffic in Belfast.

Belfast has set an example to London and to Dublin in its determined attempt to solve the traffic problem. The Northern Ministry of Home Affairs appointed inspectors, who met representatives of the Corporation tramway service and of the motor omnibus companies competing therewith. These inspectors have issued a report which faces the realities of the situation and makes daring recommendations. The Corporation tramways still are efficient, the report declares; but, if the late competition were allowed to continue unchecked, they would be obliged to close down. On the other hand, the report recognises that the motor omnibus affords "a necessary supplement" to the older means of transport. Unchecked competition on the city streets, the inspectors point out, is perilous to the public safety. The problem, then, is to put an end to competition between tramcar and omnibus, and to retain the services of both in their appropriate fields. The solution proposed is a traffic monopoly for the Corporation within the city bounds. It is recommended that the Corporation shall take over motor omnibuses which ply between termini within the city area, and shall run a co-ordinated series of tramcar and omnibus services. On the other hand, it is proposed that omnibus lines between the city and outlying parts of the Northern province shall be secured against destructive competition by the limitation of the number of the companies that are allowed to run vehicles on given routes. It is suggested that omnibuses coming into the city shall not be allowed to take up passengers after they cross the city boundary, and that omnibuses leaving the city shall not be allowed to drop passengers within the boundary. The effect of this last proposed regulation would be to safeguard the Corporation services against unreasonable competition, and, at the same time, to protect long-distance travellers from the delays and the inconvenience that are occasioned when persons within the city area seek to avail themselves of the omnibus for petty local runs. It is understood that all parties concerned—including the Northern Government—have signified acceptance of the inspectors' proposals; but it would not be surprising if the suggested monopoly should find some opponents. It must be remembered, however, that a traffic monopoly of the same sort is proposed in London, where the companies which own the tube railways and the omnibus services are expected shortly to take over the tramways. The great merit of the Belfast proposals is that they promise to end much of the jeopardy and discomfort of the overcrowded streets. The minor proposals, such as those which concern services to the gates of the shipyards and the abolition of petty trips on long-distance lines, show what new amenities a united co-ordinated transport system may afford.

Mount Etna.

Once more Sicily's volcano has thrust itself upon public notice, having been quiet since 1923, when a serious eruption devoured three villages. A few days ago new craters opened suddenly in the side of Mount Etna, and streams of lava began to descend in all directions. Rich vineyards and villages have been swept out of existence; the railway between Messina and Catania has been blocked, and miles of telegraph and telephone wires have been destroyed. The heaviest blow has fallen upon Mascali, a town of some ten thousand persons, which lies, above the Mediterranean, on the mountain's eastern slope. It has been submerged partially by a stream of lava that, towering to the height of fifteen feet, travelled at the unusually swift rate of three hundred yards an hour. Mascali might have shared the fate of Pompeii if the main tide of lava had not been diverted into the bed of torrent which flows steeply to the sea. The situation is grave; for the mountain's base is studded with villages and small towns, and experts predict that the eruption will continue for days or even weeks. Etna is a long-winded volcano, and an eruption in 1812 lasted for six months. Since the lava still is moving steadily on the eastern and southern slopes, the authorities have ordered that the town of Giarre and half-a-dozen large villages shall be evacuated. In the meanwhile Signor Mussolini's Government is taking energetic steps to restore communications and to relieve distress, and the afflicted householders have not lost their heads. Troops are regulating the exodus from the menaced districts; priests are rallying their parishioners to the banners of the local saints. Etna began to make history in the fifth century before Christ. Then its first known eruption happened, and then, according to legend, the philosopher Empedocles, hoping by such disappearance to secure the fame of a divine origin, threw himself into the crater. Since that time more than eighty eruptions have been recorded—nineteen of them in the nineteenth century—and it is a reasonable assumption that the present outburst is not the last. Nevertheless, we need not doubt that now, as before, fatalism or forgetfulness quickly will repopulate the fertile mountain-side.

Expelled Languages.

An assistant librarian is required by the Free State Department of Agriculture, and the Civil Service Commissioners have advertised the vacancy. The qualifications are a "high standard of general education, specialised knowledge of modern languages, and ability to read, translate, summarise and expand passages from continental languages." No doubt, the "high standard of general education" presumes a competent knowledge of Irish. We may believe that on this occasion the Department will get its assistant librarian, but ten years hence how many answers will it receive to a like advertisement? By that time the youth of the Free State will be completely ignorant of modern languages, and the study of such languages will have disappeared from the Free State's schools. This prediction can be made with perfect confidence. Compulsory Irish—which yesterday was clamped still more tightly on the schools by the Dáil's approval of the bill that requires a knowledge of Irish from future barristers and solicitors—is banishing the modern languages, as St. Patrick banished the snakes. As the results of the recent examinations for the intermediate certificate showed, German is virtually dead in the secondary schools and French is dying rapidly. In ten years' time not one boy in ten thousand will be able to read a French novel or a German newspaper. Yet even an Irish-speaking Ireland cannot afford to divorce itself utterly from the world. The libraries (if there are to be any libraries) will need a few students of French, German, Spanish and Italian. The Ministry of External Affairs will need a few persons who will be able to correspond with the Chancelleries of Europe. Where will such persons be found? It is a quite serious problem—involving, indeed, the national dignity—but the Free State Government seems to be wholly indifferent to it. At any rate, the Minister for Education, challenged by the swift decay of culture, maintains the silence of the Sphinx.

AIR SPEED "RECORD."

NO FURTHER ATTEMPTS THIS YEAR.

It was learned last night that no further attempts on the world's air speed "record" are to be made this year by Flight-Lieutenant D'Arcy Greig. On Sunday last he flew at the fastest speed ever attained by any airman, but was unable to break, by the requisite margin of five miles, the record of 318½ miles an hour set up by Major de Bernadi, the Italian.

LONDON LETTER.

THE GENERAL ELECTION.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

Mr. Baldwin, in the House of Commons this evening, in moving a resolution to take all the time of the House until Easter, remarked: "As it is quite uncertain when the general election will take place, legislation must be got on with as quickly as possible." The remark was much discussed by members outside, and it is thought that there is a possibility of the Government's going to the country at an earlier date than June, should circumstances favour such a course. At the moment the possibility of an election within the next six months appears remote; for the Local Government Bill will take many weeks to pass, and the introduction of a Budget will be a necessity. At the same time little importance was attached to the statement as indicating a distinct possibility.

The American Election.

The magnitude of the majority given in the United States to Mr. Hoover's supporters in the electoral college was noted here with some surprise; for few people anticipated anything of the kind. Talking to an American friend this afternoon, I asked his opinion on the result, and he at once replied that it was directly due to Puritanism. Mr. Smith is a Roman Catholic, a fact sufficient to cost him many votes; while Mr. Hoover is a Quaker, and, therefore, a Puritan, which would gain him many supporters. Added to these factors is the prohibition question, and on this Mr. Hoover probably swept up the temperance vote, and quite possibly the votes of many of the new women electors. Mr. Hoover is well known in London, having lived for a considerable time in a big house in Kensington, immediately under the shadow of the Albert Hall.

The French Crisis.

In diplomatic circles I learnt this afternoon that it is thought that M. Boincaré probably will return to office as Prime Minister in the course of the next few days, since the passing of the Budget is of vital importance to France, and it is doubtful whether any other Prime Minister would be able to carry it through. Otherwise the position will be a matter of grave concern not only to France, but to the whole of Europe. When M. Poincaré took office two years ago the franc was on the verge of complete disappearance; but by handling the situation in the most masterly manner he saved the currency, and improved the economic condition of France to a higher level than at any period since the war. His downfall, though brought about by the Radicals, is due to the fact that, now danger of financial collapse has passed away, the French public is unable to realise that it is still necessary to maintain the most rigid economy in the national finances. It is possible that a few hours' reflection will induce it to take a different point of view.

The Debate on the Address.

In the Lobby of the House of Commons this afternoon there was much talk regarding the early closing of the proceedings in the debate on the Address last night. It was generally agreed that Mr. Ramsay Macdonald had made a tactical error in trying to steal the Liberal fire on the Naval Pact. In the circumstances, it is agreed that the Prime Minister simply acted with common-sense in refusing to anticipate what he and his party leaders may have to say when the Pact amendment comes up for discussion. It is curious that the Socialists have not yet assimilated the quite ordinary rules of debate.

Safeguarding.

A meeting of Conservative members has decided to make representation to the party Whip regarding the omission of any reference to safeguarding in the Speech from the Throne; but it is improbable that an amendment to the Address, as suggested in some quarters, will be tabled. It appears that there is a growing desire in the Conservative ranks for a definite advance towards protection, though the Government will not countenance any such move at the present time. It is obvious to the observer, however, that the force of opinion in favour of making protection an issue next year is growing stronger, and the situation is becoming highly interesting.

Scotland Yard.

Lord Byng of Vimy, who took up his post at Scotland Yard to-day, will be faced with many difficult problems, and it is rumoured that he will start with a considerable reorganisation of the police force, to enable detectives to be on all night duty at Scotland Yard and at every police station throughout London. At present a policeman leaves his beat unguarded while he takes refreshment during the night; but in future continuous street duty will be arranged. A system whereby individual police officers can communicate by telephone with headquarters is likely to be installed, and police telephone kiosks may be provided in all the main streets, whereby police officers will be able to report at regular intervals. All these changes will be to the good, though it probably will take some little time to bring them into operation.

Motor Taxes.

Motorists are wondering whether the next Budget will bring them any relief in the way of taxation; for during the first nine months of this year road vehicle licences yielded the huge sum of £23,312,000, compared with £10,835,000, which was the total amount received for the year 1922, the yield having more than doubled in the course of six years. The Chancellor of the Exchequer is faced with a rather difficult problem in this connection; for, though it was probably never anticipated a few years ago that such a large sum would be obtained from this source, any reduction in the duty would have the effect of further increasing the number of vehicles on the roads, which are already congested.

The Archbishop of Canterbury.

The Archbishop of Canterbury was a prominent figure in the House of Lords yesterday, and it is expected that he will lose little time after his official retirement in taking his seat as a peer. As Archbishop he was not a Peer of the Realm, but a Lord Spiritual, which is quite a different thing. Dr. Davidson is assured of a hearty welcome when he takes up his new responsibilities in the Upper House. As Archbishop he was one of the official trustees of the British Museum, an office which he will now vacate; but his fellow-trustees have invited him to fill a vacant place among the ordinary trustees, so that he may be able to continue his interest in the Museum.

New Cruisers

A feature of the new cruisers of the County class, now running their trials, is the comparatively small number of officers and men required to form their crews. The official complement of these ships is 685, or about fifty fewer than the Frobisher class, of slightly less displacement, which were laid down during the war. Yet the Frobisher class have only seven 7.5-inch guns, whereas in the new County class there are eight 8-inch guns carried. The Frobishers have engines of 65,000 horse-power, with a designed speed of 30½ knots, whereas the County type have machinery of 80,000 horse-power and a speed of 32 knots. Labour-saving methods and appliances have been adopted to a great extent in the equipment of the new ships; for, with fifteen cruisers built and building, about 700 officers and men will be saved, as compared with a corresponding number of ships of war design—enough to form the crew of an additional ship.

WOMEN RETURN MR. HOOVER.

BIGGEST WIN ON RECORD.

MR. SMITH DECIDES TO RETIRE FROM POLITICS.

CAUSES OF THE LANDSLIDE.

"SOLID SOUTH" STATES VOTE REPUBLICAN.

	Electoral College Votes.		States Carried.		Total Poll.
HOOVER	... 444	...	40	...	*17,431,989
SMITH	... 87	...	8	...	*12,487,174
	531		48	...	*29,919,163

* Returns incomplete.

Mr. Alfred E. Smith, the Governor of New York, has sustained the heaviest defeat inflicted on a Democratic candidate for the Presidency of the United States. Even the "Solid South," which has consistently voted for the Democratic candidate ever since General Grant took Richmond (Virginia) in the American Civil War, failed in its allegiance.

In New York State, which Governor Smith so confidently expected to carry, Mr. Hoover had a comfortable margin of more than 100,000 votes.

The landslide has crushed the "farm revolt," by carrying every North-Western State and the whole of the agricultural West, and it is apparent that the swing to Mr. Hoover has carried into office increased Republican majorities, both in the House of Representatives and in the Senate.

It is expected that the final returns will show that forty States voted for Mr. Hoover, and only eight remained faithful to Mr. Smith, namely—Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina, Massachusetts and Rhode Island.

President Coolidge has telegraphed to Mr. Hoover that the election, as showing an endorsement of his own administration, was a great satisfaction to him. "With this endorsement," he adds, "I can now retire content."

MR. AL. SMITH'S DECISION.

Governor Smith announced yesterday that he never again expected to run for public office. He had had more than a quarter of a century of public life, and that was enough. He said that he had no regrets, nothing but pleasant memories of the unsuccessful campaign. "I am happy and content," was his remark, "taking my place as a high private in the ranks of American citizens."

LATEST FIGURES.

RETURNS NOT YET COMPLETE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
NEW YORK, Wednesday.

The complete returns of voting by States in the Presidential election will not be available for several days, but the following figures, compiled from official reports made by 76 per cent. of the electoral districts in the country—all that had reported by 4 p.m.—reflect the general trend of the voting.

Total number of districts in all States—115,527.

Districts reporting up to 4 p.m. to-day—87,375.

Number of votes so far cast for Hoover—17,431,989.

FROM "THE TIMES" CORRESPONDENT.
NEW YORK, Wednesday.

The Republicans have won the greatest victory ever gained by any party in the United States. Mr. Hoover won 40 of the 48 States, thus gaining 444 of the 531 electoral votes, 62 more than Mr. Coolidge won in 1924, 40 more than came to Mr. Harding in the landslide of 1920, and nine more than Mr. Woodrow Wilson got when he defeated the divided Republicans in 1912.

The four women who sat in the present Congress have all been returned and will be reinforced by three others. Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, who has carried a seat in Chicago, is the widow of the late Senator McCormick and daughter of the late Mr. Mark Hanna, the famous Republican "boss." Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owne, who held a seat in Florida for the Democrats, is a daughter of the late Mr. William Jennings Bryan; and Mrs. Ruth Pratt, who carried what is popularly known as the "silk stocking" district of New York for the Republicans, is a millionairess, who, as a member of the Board of Aldermen, has done much useful public work and had the benefit of a campaign song, "Ruth Pratt makes Tammany Behave."

THE NEW CABINET.

MANY SPECULATIONS IN WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Wednesday.

Mr. Herbert Hoover, of California, has been elected President and Mr. Charles Curtis, of Kansas, Vice-President of the United States by electoral and popular majorities, which may exceed those accorded to Mr. Harding in 1920 and Mr. Coolidge in 1924. The Republican Party has gained seats in the Senate, and may find itself emancipated from the possible control of that Chamber by a coalition of "Progressives" from its own ranks and Democrats. In the House of Representatives a large Republican majority is assured.

There is a certain cruelty in the staggering completeness of Governor Smith's defeat, because in a sense it is the man himself, rather than the party he led, who is repudiated at the polls.

IN THE SOUTH.

In the South the defection of certain States and an unprecedented Republican vote in others, which, nevertheless, are still in the Democratic column, was a triumph of Evangelical Protestantism over a Roman Catholic and opponent of prohibition in a region where sectarian prejudice is rampant and the sanctity of the Eighteenth Amendment is dogma.

In his own State of New York his years of splendid service and the boisterous affection of the country's greatest city were not enough to counter-balance the social denominational forces, alarmed and aggressive as they have never been before.

THE PROSPERITY CLAIM.

There will, of course, be a plea of avoidance from the Republicans. They will say that the prosperity manifest and the desire to maintain it have carried him to victory.

President Coolidge, in his telegram of congratulation to Mr. Hoover, talks of the endorsement of his Administration and his policies. It was the machine of prosperity which broke through the barriers, perhaps, but the force which drove it so irresistibly along was compounded of Protestantism and prohibition.

This is not to say that the country will, for all time, be content to accept adherence to the Roman Catholic Church as a disqualification for its highest office, or that the attempt to find a remedy for the political corrosion, which is called prohibition, will be abandoned. But the clock has been set back, no man can tell how far.

MR. HOOVER'S POSITION.

If the United States is to be the gainer by yesterday's result, it will be because Mr. Hoover is strong enough to rise above some of the forces which have helped to elect him. He could have been chosen without them, but it was their weight that made his "landslide," and they will want their price.

He will have need of all his strength and all his independence of mind—of all those qualities, in short, which even his admirers have vainly sought in him when expediency rules his actions—if he is to justify the faith which is placed in him.

The next President, it would be well to remember, is as completely and unmistakably an American as Mr. Coolidge, and with a dash of the aggressive in his patriotism, which is lacking in the present occupant of the White House.

NOT AN INTERNATIONALIST.

His is a conception of America romanticised by long residence abroad. For him the American way, whether it be political, social or religious, is better than any other way, and in its essence different and superior. To call him, as some of his stupid opponents have called him, an "Internationalist" is to misunderstand him completely, unless the word is distorted to mean a belief that the universe could, with advantage, be re-made after the American model. The American standard and manner of living must be jealously and fiercely preserved and nurtured behind barriers until the distant day when all the world has been won to them or has accepted them.

The composition of Mr. Hoover's Cabinet is already a matter of eager speculation, and can hardly fail to be an index of the man.

It is suggested that Mr. Dwight Morrow, now Ambassador to Mexico, may go to the State Department, but this is sheer guesswork. Senator Borah, of Idaho, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate, might be asked, and perhaps would like to be asked, to take it; but Mr. Hoover would probably offer the post with better grace if he were sure in advance that Senator Borah would refuse. The Senator has said that he and the President-elect "see eye to eye" in the matter of foreign policy—which is undoubtedly true to-day—but who can say how Senator Borah would see things after two months in the State Department? He is only "regular" at election times, and is happy only when he is irregular.

MR. MELLON.

Mr. Mellon, it is now said, may be continued in charge of the Treasury. The story that he might go to the Court of St. James's as Ambassador in succession to Mr. Houghton he himself dismissed, and there seems to be no doubt that he would like to remain in public life. His retention in the Cabinet would add strength to the new Administration, and it is more than likely that this will be arranged, but it would, nevertheless, create certain difficulties.

There is Mr. Ogden Mills, Under-Secretary of the Treasury, to be considered—one of Mr. Hoover's earliest and most devoted supporters, whose claims to direct promotion can hardly be overlooked, to say nothing to the fact that the perpetuation of Mr. Mellon might give him an authority to little less than presidential.

MR. HOUGHTON'S POSITION.

Another post which is being discussed by the rumour-mongers is that of Ambassador to Great Britain. Mr. Houghton placed his resignation in the hands of Mr. Coolidge when he returned to the United States to contest a Senator-

FRENCH CABINET CRISIS.

NO SOLUTION YET FOUND.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
PARIS, Wednesday.

At the end of to-day there was not much change in the general political situation. Although the Radical Socialist group seem disposed on the whole to interpret the decisions of the Angers Congress in the same way as MM. Herriot, Sarraut, Caillaux and Perrier—that is to say as irreconcilable with the Government's policy of national union—the belief is still held that it is to M. Poincaré that the head of the State will turn in the first place for a solution of the crisis.

The attitude adopted by the Radical Socialists of the Chamber is evidently of a nature to reinforce the objections that M. Poincaré may present for the purpose of declining.

If M. Doumergue is not able to overcome the retiring Premier's objections, the crisis will take longer to solve than was at first hoped, and he will probably have to consider the formation of a Ministry on entirely different lines.

In that case he might call on M. Briand, M. Louis Barthou or M. Steeg, whose name was being canvassed this afternoon in political circles. Lobby opinion forms the view that none of these would be faced with the same difficulties as M. Poincaré.

BRITISH GENERAL ELECTION

IN MAY OR JUNE OF NEXT YEAR.

Mr. Baldwin's statement that the date of the general election is uncertain has not disturbed the general belief that the election will be held either in May or June of next year. The new register, adding over five million women voters to the roll, comes into force on May 1st next, and it is still the intention of the Government to dissolve Parliament at as early a date as possible after May 1st.

One of the most important factors in determining the precise date of dissolution will be the Budget, which cannot be introduced before April, and must be passed into law by means of the Finance Act before the Government goes to the country.

ship for New York State, but the returns at present available indicate his defeat. His resignation could be withdrawn, or its operative date might be left indefinitely unstated if he so desired, and Mr. Hoover agreed, and Mr. Houghton has done yeoman service during the campaign. Or, if this were not arranged, then Mr. Ogden Mills, who has great wealth and unquestioned ability, might be sent to London. Nobody knows, and everybody speculates.

Mr. Hoover will have leisure to consider those and other questions during the month he is to spend in California before visiting Washington again.

PROHIBITION WINS.

WOMEN RETURN MR. HOOVER.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.
NEW YORK, Wednesday.

The "Drys" have won. Herbert Clark Hoover has swept into the Presidency of the United States on an avalanche of votes. The Republican candidate has defeated Governor Al Emmanuel Smith, his Democratic opponent, by an overwhelming electoral vote.

The total number of electoral votes to be polled was 531, with 266 necessary for election. Mr. Hoover, according to latest reports, has already secured over 460 electoral votes, smashing his opponent in a victory the most decisive in American history.

NEW YORK'S VOTE.

One of the biggest surprises in the election is Governor Smith's unexpected defeat in his home territory, New York State. Here even Mr. Hoover and the Republican bosses expected the Governor to win easily. The figures, however, show that it voted solid for Hoover, despite Tammany influences.

The earliest returns gave Governor Smith as leading in the large cities in New York State, but later figures showed the rural vote swung right round in Mr. Hoover's favour, and the small lead which Governor Smith had piled up in the capital was gradually wiped out with the later returns from up-State areas.

THE WOMEN'S VOTE.

Mr. Hoover has reached the White House on the prohibition ticket. According to the details available of State voting, the women voters have played their greatest part in history by registering solidly against any modification of the Volstead Act. The stand taken by Governor Smith on this question has, it has turned out, cost him probably millions of popular votes.

Mr. Hoover's stand on the agricultural issue won him tremendous last minute support from the Middle Western States, farming relief being one of the main planks of his platform.

MESSAGE TO THE VICTOR.

Governor Smith fought a clean fight, but the odds were insuperable against him. "I congratulate you heartily on your victory, and extend to you my sincere good wishes for your health and happiness and for the success of your administration," telegraphed the vanquished to the victor to-day.

A WILD DAY ON WALL STREET.

NEW HIGH "RECORDS."

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
NEW YORK, Wednesday.

A tumultuous roar of voices greeted the opening gong of the Stock Exchange this morning, and, amid wild scenes of excitement, hundreds of brokers scrambled and fought to execute the huge volume of orders which poured in from all parts of the country as fears of the election of Governor Smith to the presidency disappeared.

Wall street celebrated one of the greatest bull markets in history. Nearly every active stock opened sensationally higher, and, with the public buying enormous blocks, continued to climb, in spite of occasional recessions on profit-taking.

Transactions of ten thousand or twenty thousand shares were common, and so heavy was trading that the tape was 45 minutes late all day. Copper and Oils were spectacular performers, fifteen Oils and ten Coppers making new high records for the year, while Anaconda Coppers and Kennecott Coppers spurted seven and twelve points, respectively.

Airplane issues, Utilities and Chain Stores likewise advanced sharply, Wright Aeros skyrocketing 16.

Closing was strong, with active buying, although irregularity cropped out in some sections of the list. It was noteworthy, however, that the four market leaders—United States Steel Corporation, General Motors, Radio and Chrysler Motors—all closed below Monday's last sales.

THE "ALSO RANS."

Although the cables refer exclusively to the voting for Mr. Hoover and Mr. "Al" Smith, there were actually five candidates. The three who "also ran" were:—

W. Z. FOSTER ....Communist.
NORMAN THOMAS ....Socialist.
WM. F. VARNEY ....Prohibitionist.

GAELIC VOTE IN THE DAIL.

110 TO 15.

LAWYER'S BILL PASSES SECOND READING.

DOCTORS' PROTEST.

BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

DR. HENNESSY (Govt.).—"If deputies would vote for a bill making Irish compulsory for members of this House, I could understand and be sympathetic."

MR. MULCAHY—There is no analogy in that.

DR. HENNESSEY—No. There is never any analogy in anything that hits ourselves.

THIS is an excerpt from the debate on the second reading of the Legal Practitioners (Qualification) Bill, a private member's measure, sponsored by Mr. M. Conlon (Government), which proposes to make a knowledge of Irish obligatory for future entrants to the legal professions.

Dr. Hennessey's speech was by far the best that has been made during the debate on the bill, which has lasted over four or five sittings of the Dail. "The administrators of the law," he said, scathingly, "are to have a knowledge of the Irish language, but the law-makers are to go scot free."

THE LANGUAGE OF PATRIOTS.

There was more to come from the doctor, who has a blunt way with him. "Will you pass a bill compelling trade unionists to have a knowledge of Irish before they are fully qualified?" he asked. "Of course, you will not, because trade unionists have votes and might resent it."

The volume of interruptions from both Government and Fianna Fail benches showed that the Gaelic enthusiasts were not pleased, but Dr. Hennessey was determined to have his say. "I would not like to see the English language abolished in this country," he said.

English, he added, was the language spoken by Robert Emmet and Wolfe Tone and Philpot Curran—"the most imperishable lessons in Irish patriotism were spoken in the English language." As to the unity of Ireland, he believed that this was, to say the least of it, not one of the ways to secure it.

The bill was supported by Dr. Ward (Fianna Fail), and opposed by Mr. Haslett (Independent). Mr. Coburn (N.L.) quoted the bill to show that it would be possible to have a judge on the bench who did not understand the Irish language, while the advocate might state his case in that language. There was no provision in the bill to ensure that the Chief Justice himself should be an Irish speaker. The bill, in his view, would defeat its own object.

110 TO 15.

The reply of Mr. Conlon was ineffective. He thought that Irish unity was less important than the restoration of the Irish language, because the unity of Ireland was bound to come.

On a division the second reading of the bill was carried by 110 votes to 15.

Those forming the minority were:—Deputies Alton (Independent, Dublin University), J. W. Beckett (Government, Dublin, South), J. J. Byrne (Government, Dublin, North), Coburn (National League, Louth), J. J. Cole (Independent, Cavan), Major Bryan Cooper (Government, Dublin County), Sir James Craig (Independent, Dublin University), J. Good (Independent, County Dublin), A. Haslett (Independent, Monaghan), Dr. T. Hennessy (Government, Dublin South), Matthews (Government, Meath), J. X. Murphy (Independent, Dublin County), Major J. S. Myles (Independent, Donegal), D. G. O'Mahony (Government, Wicklow), and Thrift (Independent, Dublin University).

CIVIC GUARDS.

The House spent nearly four precious hours earlier in the day listening to speeches on the Civic Guards' estimate, a subject that was talked threadbare a week ago. If deputies had said something new, something different from all the other speeches that were made in the debate, there would have been some justification for the volume of talk; but there was scarcely a constructive suggestion made from the Opposition benches. There was merely a rehash of the charges of violence and partisanship against the Guards and the C.I.D.

There was a notable exception. Mr. O'Reilly, who is one of the most temperate-minded men in the Fianna Fail Party, pointed out that in Meath, his constituency, the Civic Guards conducted themselves with honour and credit; but, at the same time, he regarded the C.I.D. as "a body of men without responsibility."

His colleague, Mr. Corkery, did not agree, and quoted instances of alleged interference by both Guards and C.I.D. with the liberty of the subject.

At this point there was one of the few humorous interludes of the debate. The Minister for Justice was leaning back, with eyes closed and hands clasped. "I do not like to see Justice asleep," said Mr. Corkery.

"Believe me," retorted the Minister sweetly, "I am listening to every word," and then he sank back to his restful position on the Government front bench.

MANY RAIDS ALLEGED.

Messrs. Carney and Kerlin, of the Fianna Fail Party, also criticised the administration of the Civic Guards. They were supported by Mr. Mullins, of the same party, who said that there were too many Guards and too many barracks. He spoke of the "political activities" of the Guards' "auxiliary force," the C.I.D., and alleged that wholesale raids had taken place during last week-end "all over the twenty-six counties." "Was there a new gunpowder plot or a Bolshevist scheme to destroy the State," he asked, "that these raids were necessary?"

Mr. Mullins gave the House a hearty laugh when he read a resolution passed by the Sligo Council, "Alderman John Jinks dissenting."

A good word was said for the Guards by Mr. John Daly (Government), and by Dr. Hennessy (Government).

MINISTER'S REPLY.

The Minister's closing speech was the best effort that he has made in the Dail. There was real fire in his voice yesterday when he defended the Guards against the Opposition onslaught. "When charges are brought against innocent men by deputies in this House I shall defend the men. If anyone feels that he is aggrieved by any action of the Guards, he has his redress, and if a Guard commits a crime, he is as much liable to such punishment as the law provides as any other member of the community."

Pressed by Fianna Fail deputies to explain recent raids, Mr. FitzGerald-Kenney said: "I do not intend to do anything of the kind. I am not going to help criminals by allowing information in my possession to be publicly circulated."

Fianna Fail called for a division, and the vote was passed by 79 votes to 53.

The Dail then turned to the vote for the maintenance of the Haulbowline Dockyard. During this debate Mr. Burke, Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Works, had a bad time. Debating power is not Mr. Burke's strong point, and the Opposition took full advantage of his weakness in this respect. He explained that the dockyard was kept in good condition, and could be quickly opened to full capacity if required. A volley of questions was fired at Mr. Burk and in no case was his answer satisfactory to the questioner. It was hardly a useful debate, but on a division the vote was carried by 83 votes to 55.

A burst of applause from the "Aye" Lobby indicated that something unusual had happened. It had, in fact; for Mr. Corry, the irrepressible Fianna Fail member for East Cork, had voted with the Government.

ETNA'S HAVOC.

LAVA OVERWHELMS TOWNS.

PITIFUL POSITION OF VILLAGERS.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
CATANIA, Wednesday.

The principal stream of lava from the Etna crater flows ruthlessly onward and swells as it advances. It has wrought much havoc in the village of Mascali, where the War Memorial and the greater portion of the parish church have been destroyed. The fiery stream now threatens the bridge over the railway that runs between Catania and Messina.

The other stream, moving towards Annunziata, has destroyed several farms.

According to the latest news, Mascali and the little village of Annunziata are almost wholly destroyed. The electric light plants have failed, and darkness adds to the horror of the scene. The work of evacuation is carried on with the aid of torches, whose fitful light produces fantastic effects.

The town of Giarre, which lies upon the sea coast, some twenty-five miles north of Catania, now is seriously threatened. It has a population of some twenty thousand souls, with flourishing commerce and industries. Its destruction, therefore, would be a very serious disaster.

UNPRECEDENTED FLOW.

Seismological experts state that the present eruption of Mount Etna is unprecedented, both as regards its violence and the quantity of matter erupted, amounting to thousands of tons. They believe that it is likely to continue for some time.

The condition of the inhabitants of Mascali is deplorable. They were celebrating the feast day of their patron saint—St. Leonard—when the molten lava swept down and turned their merriment to grief and mourning. The lava, however, spared the façade of the main church at Mascali, together with the belfry, which stands erected amidst the smoke and fire and ashes as a symbol of faith and hope, and the faithful confident in the Almighty have transferred the figures of the saints and the Madonnas to an impromptu altar, erected in the open air. Candles burn upon it, while the kneeling priests and people sing their Litanies and offer prayers to Heaven.

Hope still is entertained that part of Mascali may be spared, as the stream of lava has been deflected into the bed of the Serragnano torrent, where it is flowing down into the sea, instead of spreading across the fertile plain.

The lava stream at its widest part extended over two thousand feet and covered a stretch of ten miles long from the first crater that burst into eruption.

The inhabitants, after the first shock of terror, which seemed to deprive them of all power of action, have awakened to the need of saving what they can, and it is pitiful to see their efforts to remove the furniture, doors, shutters, and even water pipes, of their threatened homes to places of safety.

All steamers plying to and from Messina have been ordered to put in at Catania and thus partially replace the interrupted railway service.

SENATE ELECTION.

NINETEEN CANDIDATES ON THE DAIL PANEL.

The Speaker, in the Dail yesterday, announced that only as many persons had been nominated, pursuant to Section 5 of the Senate Electoral Act, 1928, for inclusion in the panel of candidates at the triennial election of members of the Senate in 1928, as there are members to be elected.

He accordingly declared the following selected by Dail Eireann for inclusion in the panel:—

P. J. Brady,
S. L. Brown,
Alfred Byrne,
Joseph Connolly,
Michael Comyn,
Kathleen Clarke,
Michael Davitt,
Lord Farnham,
Oliver St. John Gogarty,
P. J. Hooper,
Thomas Johnson,
S. E. McEllin,
Sir Bryan Mahon,
Sean Milroy,
Sir Walter M. Nugent,
Joseph O'Doherty,
Seumas Robinson,
William Sears,
Richard Wilson.

The time allowed to Senators to submit nominations ends to-morrow afternoon, but it is unlikely that more than the statutory nineteen will be proposed, as the new "party ticket" arrangement discourages candidates without party affiliations or a certain measure of party support. In order to assure a full panel of thirty-eight candidates (in accordance with the requirements of the Seanad Electoral Act) names appearing in the Dail list may be duplicated in the Senate portion of the panel.

Some such understanding was reached by Senators and deputies, who met informally yesterday to discuss the contingency of less than the statutory nineteen nominations being made by either House.

The Seanad Electoral Act, it should be explained, makes it obligatory on each House to nominate as many candidates as there are vacancies—in the present case nineteen.

The persons whose names are likely to figure both in the Dail and Senate portions of the panel are:—

Senators Brady, Hooper, Brown, Sir Bryan Mahon and Sir Walter Nugent, and Messrs. Milroy and Wilson, ex-T.D.'s.

The full panel of thirty-eight candidates will be published not later than the 16th inst., and the election proper, it is expected, will be held about the 27th November.

It was stated with some confidence in political circles last night that the Chairman of the Senate, Lord Glenavy, did not intend to seek re-election.

WHY MEN GO BALD.

WATER A PROLIFIC CAUSE.

Why do men go bald? Dr. S. Ernest Dore, a skin specialist, speaking on the hygiene of the skin to the Institute of Hygiene, London, yesterday, said that he was certain that water was a prolific cause of baldness. Many reasons were advanced in the past, one being that men did more brain work than women.

"That, I think, is all rubbish," said Dr. Dore, and an almost entirely feminine audience applauded his disclosure.

Another reason which was formerly put forward was the "horrible hard hats," but that also was discounted by Dr. Dore. He characterised it as a doubtful explanation. Then he came to "the real reason" for baldness.

"Recent research by some colleagues of mine," he said, "has resulted in the discovery of a bacillus which has been named 'the bottle bacillus,' because of its resemblance to a bottle. This bacillus grows on the skin, and by degrees causes loss of hair. Dandruff has been almost proved to be due to this bacillus.

"With men and boys—particularly with boys"—he added, "it is a common custom to use wet hair brushes to flatten down the hair. I am perfectly certain that water is a prolific cause of baldness."

LATE NEWS.

SOUTH AFRICAN CABINET.

MR. SAMPSON AS MINISTER.

FROM "THE TIMES" CORRESPONDENT.
PRETORIA, Wednesday.

It is understood that Mr. Sampson's appointment as eleventh Minister, in place of Mr. Madeley, was not sanctioned without stiff opposition in the Cabinet. Mr. Tielman Roos, Deputy Prime Minister and leader of the Nationalist Party in the Transvaal, strongly opposed a fresh appointment. There are murmurings of strong discontent among the Nationalist rank and file to-day. It is pointed out that Colonel Creswell has only ten followers in Parliament now, owing to the Labour split, and the fact that there are three representatives of this small party in the Cabinet is keenly criticised.

A leading back-bench Nationalist, Mr. O. Pirow, K.C., sarcastically stated to-day: "We seem to have evolved a new principle of representation applicable to Cabinet-making—namely, one member, one Minister. There is comfort in the reflection, however, that even on this basis we may have no Labour Ministers in the next Cabinet."

Our Cape Town Correspondent telegraphed yesterday, adds The Times, that Mr. Sampson's appointment was interpreted as a defeat within the Cabinet for Mr. Tielman Roos, who in the quarrel inside the South African Labour Party has been inclined to back the National Council faction against Colonel Creswell, leader of the rival faction.

MISSING AIRMEN FOUND DEAD.

MACHINE WRECKED IN MOORLAND BOG.

Pilot-Officer Charles L. Myers and Aircraftsman H. Chadwick, who left Catterick aerodrome, Yorkshire, on Tuesday morning on a photographic flight in the vicinity and failed to return, were found dead about 3 p.m. yesterday, amid the wreckage of their machine, in an almost inaccessible ridge on the high moors between Redmire and Grinton.

The accident, with the fatality yesterday at Boothby Graffoe, Lincolnshire, brings the total of Royal Air Force men killed this year to 68. Last year there were 55 deaths in accidents.

Police from all parts of the north riding, troops from Catterick camp and Richmond garrison, and hundreds of volunteers took part in the search. The wreckage was first sighted by Flying-Officer Lambie from a scout aeroplane, who returned to Catterick and headed a motor party, accompanied by an ambulance. Owing to the extent of the moor he could not locate the exact spot and had to again fly over the moor and signal the position to the motor party. Owing to the boggy nature of the ground, the motor cars and ambulance could not be got to within a mile of it, and the rescuers found that both the wrecked machine and the men were half-buried in the bog.

The machine had crumpled up like a concertina, and there was great difficulty in getting the bodies out of the wreckage.

Prior to joining the Royal Air Force in September last year, Pilot-Officer Myers, who was aged 20, was employed by the Lindsey County Council as a clerk at Lincoln. He passed out of the Sealand Flying School four weeks ago.

AIR FORCE PILOT KILLED.

As the result of an accident near Boothby Graffoe, Lincolnshire, to an Avro machine of No. 2 Flying Training School, Digby, yesterday, Pilot Officer Richard Harold Coupe, the pilot and sole occupant of the aircraft, was killed. A second aeroplane, in descending in the same field, came into contact with the hedge and turned completely over, but both the occupants were unhurt.

PRINCESS MARY AT MITCHAM.

TWO MEN CREATE A SCENE.

The people of Mitcham received a visit from Royalty for the first time yesterday, when Princess Mary opened the Wilson Cottage Hospital, which has been erected on the edge of the common. Thousands of people, mostly women and children, thronged the common, which was decorated with flags and red bunting.

About ten minutes after the Princess had entered the hospital two men made their way through the crowd to the gates. A commotion followed, and the men were eventually removed by the police, one of them having to be lifted bodily from the ground and carried.

SANATORIUM FIRE.

PATIENTS TAKEN FROM THEIR BEDS.

Part of the roof of the Southend-on-Sea Borough Sanatorium caught fire last night as the result, it is believed, of a spark blown from a huge bonfire which was burning near-by on the previous night.

The outbreak occurred in the female ward, and there was considerable excitement among the women patients, who were rushed from their beds into another ward.

Members of the staff used the fire extinguisher to such good effect that, when three fire engines and twenty-seven men arrived on the scene, they found that the fire was out.

EMPIRE TRADE.

MR. AMERY ON THE MARKETS PROBLEM.

Speaking at Clitheroe last night, Mr. L. S. Amery, Dominions Secretary, said that wherever he went during his tour of the Colonies and Dominions last year the people were confronted with the problem of markets. Once a market was assured to them there was virtually no limit to the developments which could take place in every one of the Dominions. Never were British industries more efficiently organised or the workers more capable.

"Here," he said, "are all of us, partners in the British Empire, each wanting markets, and each having markets which can supply each other's needs. Here, obviously, is a case for combing our resources and our powers of helping each other—a case for co-operation. I see no reason why, through the depression of these difficult days, we could not by co-operation make our way to a prosperity of which no one has yet dreamt. This is the sure way to progress, and I see no other."

ENNISKILLEN DEMONSTRATION.

There was a remarkable demonstration in the Methodist Church, Enniskillen, last night, when the result of the Presidential election in America was announced from the pulpit. The large congregation applauded for some time, and then sang the Doxology.

The Rev. S. Wilson, in the course of an address, said that it was a great victory for Prohibition and Protestantism, and a great defeat for Smith, the Tammany Hall man, the Roman Catholic and the "wet."

BELFAST TRAFFIC "WAR."

TRAMWAY SYSTEM ENDANGERED.

INSPECTORS' REPORT.

The report of the two inspectors, Mr. D. L. Clarke, O.B.E., and Dr. Bryan, who were appointed by the Northern Ministry of Home Affairs to inquire into the proposed by-laws of the Belfast Corporation for dealing with 'bus traffic in the City of Belfast, was issued yesterday.

At the outset the inspectors declare that, in their opinion, "on any view the by-laws, as at present submitted, could not receive the approval of the Ministry."

Among the conclusions at which the inspectors arrived are that the city transport should be a monopoly, subject to obligations and safeguards, and that the monopoly should be in the hands of the municipality; that the financial administration of the tramways undertaking has been excellent; that the services have been on the whole efficient, but that there has been undue crowding at certain hours which might have been avoided by better arrangement of services.

THE TRAMWAY UNDERTAKING.

The inspectors also express the opinion that the Tramway Committee have not been sufficiently active and enterprising in the exercise of their powers for making use of omnibuses to supplement the tramway services; that the present competition is unequal and greatly increases the danger of traffic in the city; that illegitimate methods of competition are being used by drivers of omnibuses; that if the present competition continues the tramway undertaking will have to close down at an early date, and that the closing of the undertaking would have very serious financial consequences.

The inspectors say further that omnibuses are a necessary supplement to a tramway service for dealing with city transport.

INSPECTORS' RECOMMENDATIONS.

The recommendations of the inspectors are as follows:—

1.—That the city traffic should be in the hands of the Belfast Municipality.

2.—That the proposed by-laws be not approved.

3.—That new by-laws be presented embodying amendments to the following effect:—

(a) Facilities be given to enable omnibuses carrying workmen to their work to convey them direct to their places of employment, and to pick them up at the same places.

(b) The definition of "omnibuses" to be amended so as to include "Corporation omnibuses."

(c) The definition of "traffic superintendent" to be amended.

(d) A minimum fare in excess of the tramway fare for corresponding stages to be fixed for omnibuses, the excess not to exceed 100 per cent.

(e) The proposal as to stands to be altered so as to give stands nearer the city centre for certain routes.

(f) Stopping places for omnibuses dealing with city traffic (if allowed) to be not less than 40 yards from tram stops.

(g) By-law No. 15, which fixes a limit of one minute for stopping, to set down and pick up passengers, to be amended and made in general terms.

(h) By-laws 89 and 12 to be made more definite and to set out more particularly the regulations for governing the stands.

(j) Private depots to be encouraged.

(k) The prohibited area to be reduced in size on the South side.

(l) To facilitate city traffic (if allowed to private operators) a limited number of omnibuses to be allowed to run through the prohibited area without stopping.

(m) Omnibuses dealing with country traffic not to be allowed to pick up passengers on the inward journey within the city, or to set down passengers within the city on the outward journey.

(n) The charge for stands to be reduced by 33⅓ per cent.

(o) The operation of the by-laws to be limited to a period of not more than two years.

CITY TRAFFIC MONOPOLY.

4.—As an alternative to dealing with the matter by by-law, that legislation should be introduced giving the Belfast Municipality a monopoly of the city traffic, subject to their existing obligations, and to further safeguards to secure an efficient service.

5.—That at the same time the opportunity should be taken of dealing with country traffic, so as to give protection to an operator who is providing a satisfactory and efficient service on a particular route.

AGREEMENT RATIFIED.

It was announced at the Belfast City Hall yesterday that an agreement had been reached in the dispute between motor coach owners and the Corporation, and that the "transport war" was over.

The terms of agreement are:—

That the Corporation will have exclusive control of a transport service within the municipality and for a quarter of a mile beyond the various tramway termini.

That they will take over private 'buses to the maximum number of fifty; and

That the 'bus owners in return will receive protection from competition in connection with their existing county services.

The agreement was ratified at a meeting of the Police and Tramway Committee.

Mr. Chamberlain, the tramway manager, afterwards explained that, by the agreement, special tickets would be issued to the 'bus owners by the Corporation for use when conveying passengers from outside to their city destinations.

NORTHERN SOLICITORS IN FREE STATE COURTS.

At the Stranorlar District Court on Wednesday District Justice Hanrahan referred to the communication that he had received from the Minister of Justice as to the order requiring Northern solicitors practising in Free States Courts to pay licence to the Dublin Exchequer.

Mr. S. Magee, the only solicitor from across the border present in Court, said that so far as the practitioners in that Court from Strabane were concerned every one of them had a licence from the Free State.

The Justice said that he assumed that as matter of fact all along.

Mr. Magee said that he was surprised to read that of the Derry solicitors there was only one who had a Free State licence.

FREE STATE WOOLLEN MILLS' PLIGHT.

APPLICATION FOR A PROTECTIVE TARIFF.

MIDDLEMEN GET THE LARGER SHARE.

"It is not economic that our cloth is shipped to London and re-shipped to this country. Is it proper that retailers should depend on non-Irish wholesale houses for their supplies?"

Counsel for the Irish Woollen and Worsted Manufacturers raised these questions in the course of his address replying to the opposition case, when the Free State Tariff Commission sat for further consideration of the manufacturers' application for a tariff of 25 per cent. ad valorem duty on woollens and worsted tissues of the weight of seven ounces per square yard and upwards imported into the Free State.

The Irish mill, counsel stated, sold the cloth to the English wholesaler, who resold it in the bunch to the Irish merchant at a profit of 70 per cent. To that price the local distributor added 37½ per cent. profit on sale to the consumer. Thus the final price to the local consumer was actually 247 per cent. of the original mill price to the British wholesaler.

WHOLESALERS BLAMED.

A RETAILER'S EVIDENCE.

Mr. R. H. Mills, merchant draper and tailor, Monaghan, giving evidence, said that he could now get in Irish-made cloth the patterns he wanted. The public, he found, bought on appearance, and in his opinion the Free State manufacturers were far behind the Scottish and Yorkshire manufacturers in design and finish. Irish manufacturers made a mistake in not getting into direct touch with the retailers. During the last six or seven years the wholesalers were reducing the number of cloths from the Irish manufacturers and were increasing the number from British manufacturers. The retail trade had never had a chance of getting the full range of Irish tweeds.

He himself had seen early last year in Belfast a range of patterns from Free State manufacturers such as he had never seen in any wholesale house. He mentioned an instance of a representative of a manufacturer going direct to him and offering him ten yards of cloths from which he might select. The firm was permitted to make such an offer by the wholesalers, but, as the quantity was limited to the ten yards, witness could not do business. This representative was the only representative of an Irish manufacturer whom he had seen in six or seven years. The Irish manufacturers were very much to blame in not getting into direct touch with the retailers when they found that a shrinkage of from eight million to two million yards had occurred in their output. They should have offered to quote to retailers at the same price as wholesalers would.

Professor Whelehan—In other words, they should do the work of the wholesalers?

Witness said that the shrinkage was one that certainly called for investigation, and in no better way than that suggested could it be done.

The Chairman remarked that the problem of dealing directly with the retailer was not so easy as at it might appear at first sight.

Witness, continuing, said that when speaking to the representative of a Belfast firm he was informed that of the turnover of that firm 70 per cent. had been done in Southern Ireland before the import duty had been put on clothing. That trade had now practically ceased.

The Chairman, reminding the witness that he had described the Irish manufacturers as being behind in design and finish, asked—Have you seen many patterns?

Mr. Mills said that he might have seen 250 or 300 patterns. In appearance Irish cloth was "dead," while British was "live," and he found that the public bought on appearance. In quality he had nothing to say against Irish, and his own inclination was to sell all the Irish material he could. In the matter of quality he had never been let down by Irish cloths.

COUNSEL'S REPLY.

A DECLINING INDUSTRY.

Mr. C. P. McCarthy, on behalf of the applicants, criticised at length the evidence put forward in opposition. Mr. Mills, he said, had made a reflection on the Irish wholesale trade, and had suggested that the manufacturers should go directly to the retailers. Why should they not go a step further and get in direct touch with the retailers' customers? A previous witness had declared that if the mills left the business to the wholesalers it would be very much better done.

It was in the order of things, Mr. McCarthy continued, that one of their oldest industries should get encouragement from their recently-acquired powers of national legislation. In recent years the existence of their mills had been seriously imperilled. Their output was declining; their home market was disappearing; unemployment was rife among them, and several mills had ceased operating. Since 1920 over 1,000 hands had ceased to be employed; production had decreased by nearly 2,000,000 yards; the wages bill had decreased approximately by £125,000, and home sales had decreased by nearly three-quarters of a million sterling. Since the application had been formulated two more mills had unfortunately ceased working. The applicants sought to have the home market preserved for their products. They did a substantial export trade with other countries; and how was it their export sales were increasing and the home trade showing a depressing and calamitous decline? If their cloths were unsuitable, as the opposition alleged, for the present-day needs, how was it that Mr. Wigglesworth, a big London wholesaler, did the bulk of his Irish trade in Irish woollens?

THE OPPOSITION.

He submitted that the opposition was neither unanimous nor representative. They had lodged a list of firms as forming the group they represented, but he had laid before the Commission letters from several firms in that group disassociating themselves from the opposition and strongly approving of the application. Mr. Wigglesworth told them that he did nearly three-quarters of his Irish trade in Irish-made cloths. He bought cloth here, took it to London, and sold it back in the Free State. How any Irish house could endorse the continuance of such a perfectly illogical and economically suicidal method of selling Irish cloth he could not fathom, and he believed that the application would receive the whole-hearted support of the management and shareholders of the sound Irish concerns. Every Irish wholesaler was suffering from the absence of a tariff, for surely the local wholesale trade was their especial province. The assertion by the opponents that tariffs increased prices was not founded on fact, because the witnesses who were before the Commission from the "tariffed" trades make a mockery of the assertion, and strongly maintained that tariffs had actually decreased prices. The case of the opponents that the Irish mills had ineffective methods of sales, and that they were not sufficiently pushing in either the home or foreign markets, was contradicted by their own witnesses, Messrs. Callanan, Fitzgibbon and O'Connor, who paid tribute to their energetic sales methods.

On the question of cloth values the opposition evidence was conflicting, and he submitted that the cloths were eminently suitable for the local markets. The opposition told them that their sales to America were increasing yearly, and how, in face of such evidence, could they put forward a charge of unsuitability?

As to the woollen distributive interests represented by the opposition, he pointed out that there were 2,257 distributors, and there were only 170 on the list of the opposition—six per cent. of the total number. It was claimed that these 170 firms did 90 per cent. of the trade. If that was correct, it meant that each firm on the opponents' list did approximately 111 times the trade of each non-opponent firm, and, taking the trade in woollens as £2,000,000, there were over 2,000 drapers and wholesalers with an average trade of less than £100 per year each in woollens. Of the 97 towns in the Free State with a population of over 1,500 the opposition was represented in only 27 of them.

DISTRIBUTIVE METHODS.

The general practice of the woollen trade, Mr. McCarthy proceeded, was that the mills produced cloth, disposed of it to wholesalers and merchants, who wholesaled it to drapers and tailors, who in turn marketed it to the consumer. Wholesalers strongly objected to this method of distribution. A tariff was sorely needed to remedy the grave economic losses arising from the present system of wholesale distribution in this country. A witness had deplored that he was seldom offered supplies of Irish cloths. If that were so the distributors appeared to be grievously at fault. The Commission had heard of a witness buying his Irish cloths from London merchants. The wholesale trade of this country was admittedly not centred, as it should be, in the hands of local wholesalers, and, conducted as it was, it entailed grievous economic losses to consumers. It was not economic that our cloth is shipped to London and re-shipped to this country. Is is proper that retailers should depend on non-Irish wholesale houses for their supplies? There was another feature of this trade which was still more deplorable, and that was the position of certain merchants in this country who actually bought Irish cloths from English wholesalers. The Irish mill sold the cloth to the English wholesaler and the English wholesaler resold it in the bunch to the Irish merchant at a profit of 70 per cent. To that price the local distributor added 37½ per cent. profit on sale to the consumer. Thus, the final price to the local consumer was actually 247 per cent. of the original mill price to the British wholesaler. Such a wholly wasteful and economically scandalous method of distribution should cease.

IRISH MILLS.

The efficiency of the Irish mills had been challenged on the ground that they employed more operatives per loom than did Great Britain. The facts were that the number of operatives per loom in Scotland was 3.8, in Leeds 3.9, and in the Free State 3.9. In 1925, the worst year in the history of the Irish mills, £174,000 was paid in wages alone.

Official figures showed that within one year of the clothing tariff there was a reduction of 37 per cent. in value of imports, yet the opposition asked the Commission to accept the assertion that tariffs did not stop imports. As to the statement that there was no extensive trade in fancy worsteds, he declared that the Irish manufacturers sold a considerable quantity of the better-class worsteds in the West Riding of Yorkshire, which was the very stronghold of the trade in England. The Commission had it on the sworn testimony of their opponents that their whole cloth range was one suitable to their market, superior in certain lines to anything imported, and capable of being sold on competitive terms with British cloths. Free State imports of woollens and worsteds represented practically 66 per cent. of the whole supplies in 1923. If their imports in 1926 were at the same rate per head of the population as were United States imports, Free State imports would be only £3,000, instead of which they were nearly £1,200,000. It was never their intention to seek a tariff on goods not made in the country, but on such goods as could be made economically. They had no objection to a two-tier tariff. If the home market were secured, they could fully meet the needs of the purchasing public.

The Commission then went into private session.

PLAZA RESTAURANT, DUBLIN.

OPENING LUNCHEON.

To mark the opening of the new Plaza Restaurant, Middle Abbey street, Dublin, over a hundred guests, including Mr. P. McGilligan, Minister for Industry and Commerce, and Mr. Desmond Fitzgerald, Minister for Defence, were entertained to luncheon by the directors of the company yesterday.

Before luncheon the guests inspected the restaurant, which has been built on a sumptuous scale, and designed to be used alternatively as a public restaurant with an entrance from Middle Abbey street and an entrance from the foyer of the Plaza Ballroom, so that the restaurant may be used in conjunction with dances given in the ballroom. The general scheme of decoration is in modern Renaissance of the French School with a system of artificial shaded lighting, which has been used for the first time in Dublin. The ventilating and heating are of the latest type.

The kitchen is a model of what culinary departments should be, where eight French chefs, six Irish boys in training, and a staff of assistants, work under the direction of M. Geldof, lately chef de cuisine of the Palais George V., Paris. Sixty experienced waiters and waitresses have been engaged, and over 600 guests can normally be accommodated. One thousand can sit down in comfort when the tables are adapted for a dinner or a banquet.

THE SPEECHES.

After luncheon, the toast of "The Irish Free State" was moved by Mr. Raymond A. Burke, D.L., chairman of the board of directors, and duly honoured. Mr. Burke stated that in the restaurant they had the most up-to-date heating, lighting and ventilation obtainable. The directors had spared no expense in trying to give Dublin a hall worthy of the metropolis. The furnishing and fittings had been carried out and, where possible, made by local labour, and finally they had done everything in their power to ensure that their guests could always rely upon getting excellently-cooked food, excellently served and at moderate prices. They had provided a menu to suit all classes from the humblest to the highest in the land.

The name of M. Geldof, he said, was a guarantee of the service that the restaurant would give. Two of the Irish boys of the chef's staff would go to Paris to be trained.

Responding on behalf of the guests, Mr. F. M. Summerfield said that the Plaza directors had provided a building without equal in the country, which would help Dublin to take its place as the worthy capital of the country. Some people might be shocked at the idea of a restaurant like the Plaza remaining open until 1 a.m., but they were living in the twentieth century, and there was no reason why Dubliners should not enjoy in their own city the facilities that they were glad to avail themselves of abroad.

Mr. Sidney L. Fry said that he hoped that the venture would be a success, and stated that it supplied for Dublin a service that was badly needed.

Mr. C. L. Ferriss, Consul-General in Dublin for the United States, expressed his pleasure at the appreciation of the restaurant and the fare provided. Speaking for the American tourists, who, he said, would visit the restaurant in large numbers next season, he assured the directors that the restaurant would become, in their eyes, one of the most popular features of Dublin's social life.

Thanking the speakers for their good wishes, the Chairman assured them that the Plaza would do its utmost to maintain a high standard of efficiency, and expressed the hope that it would continue to enjoy the support of the citizens of Dublin.

THE ATTENDANCE.

QUADRUPLETS CHRISTENED AT NEWRY.

THREE SETS OF TWINS IN ONE FAMILY.

Quadruplets born to Mr. and Mrs. McCaigue, of Newry, Co. Down, on Tuesday, have been christened respectively as Noel, Walter, John and Thomas. Mother and infants are doing well.

Married sixteen years ago, Mrs. McCaigue has borne fifteen children, including three sets of twins. A few years ago two sets of triplets were born in Newry on successive days.

One child, John, died last night, and Thomas's condition causes anxiety.

Mr. William McCaigue served in the Great War along with his brother in the 13th Royal Irish Rifles (First County Downs) and was wounded, and is at present on the permanent way staff of the Great Northern Railway. He has been the recipient of many congratulations.

At a meeting of the Dublin Union Commissioners held yesterday, it was stated that the debit balance in bank is £7,809.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

APPROPRIATION OF TIME.

DEBATE ON THE ADDRESS.

LORD CUSHENDUN AND THE NAVAL PACT.

FROM OUR PARLIAMENTARY CORRESPONDENT.
WESTMINSTER, Wednesday.

The House of Commons was well filled this afternoon, particularly on the Government side, for a division was expected on the motion of the Prime Minister, that the Government should take the whole time of the House until Easter.

Questions were few, but one or two were of general interest. Mr. Thurtle suggested that the troops present at the Armistice Day celebration at the Cenotaph should parade without arms; but Sir Laming Worthington-Evans pointed out that the troops were present as representing the Army, and as living comrades of those whose deaths the Cenotaph commemorates, and the ceremony should be accorded the highest military honours. Mr. Thurtle went on to suggest that the presence of arms was a violation of the spirit and purpose of the ceremony, but the House objected, and the Secretary for War replied that he was mistaken.

ALLOCATION OF TIME.

The Prime Minister's proposal, allocating the whole time of the House to Government business, up to Easter, was only half-heartedly fought by the Opposition, who probably were anxious to resume the debate on the address. Mr. Baldwin rather disarmed criticism by suggesting that there should be a conference of parties with the object of coming to some permanent arrangement in regard to the allocation of time. He suggested that there would be more opportunities for private members to take part in the debate if the two Front Benches occupied less of the available time.

Mr. Lloyd George observed that the motion put the Opposition in something of a dilemma. If they accepted it they would be departing from precedent, and if they supported it they would be delaying the dissolution. It might be inferred that the right hon. gentleman was rather in favour of an early appeal to the country, as he went on to say that his long experience of Parliament led him to the conclusion that the time allocated to private members was not fully utilised. As it was, it was easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a private member to get a bill through the House of Commons.

VOTING ROBOTS.

Mr. Thurtle said that the rank and file in the House were becoming nothing more than voting robots. He instanced the case of Sir Basil Peto, who had been threatened with expulsion for daring to adopt an independent attitude. In effect, said Mr. Thurtle, the Prime Minister told his supporters that they must either become robots or perish.

Mr. Hardie suggested that, instead of sacrificing the private member, they should cut down the holiday recesses.

The motion, on a division, was carried by 173 votes to 136.

DEBATE ON ADDRESS.

Captain Wedgwood Benn, who continued the general debate on the Address, made his first speech as a Labour member. He criticised the Prime Minister's refusal to say anything on the naval agreement with France pending the debate on the amendment dealing with this subject. The Prime Minister, he said, ought to have taken the earliest opportunity to remove the suspicions that had been aroused, and which had strained our good relations with the United States. We had put ourselves in the ridiculous position of seeking an agreement with France in order to get the better of the United States. The result had been to give a stimulus to the big navy party in America.

Colonel Howard Bury said that, if there was any trouble abroad with regard to the Naval Pact, it had been largely caused by Mr. Lloyd George. (Cries of dissent.) He hoped that nothing would be said to cast disfavour on the Anglo-French Entente, which had made the Locarno Treaty possible.

Mr. Batey diverted the talk from foreign policy to home affairs. He said that he observed for the first time a reference in the King's Speech to the mining industry, and construed this as tantamount to a confession on the part of the Government that they had failed to find any means of relieving the distress in the mining areas. Mr. G. Hall suggested that all men in industry over sixty years of age should be pensioned off by the State in order to find work for younger men who now are unemployed.

Mr. David Kirkwood raised a slight breeze by charging the President of the Board of Trade with having financially benefited by the increase of the miners' hours of working. Mr. Hope, who was in the chair, told the hon. member that he must not make personal attacks like that.

Sir P. Cunliffe Lister intervened to say that the allegation of the hon. member was entirely untrue. He had fully disclosed to the House any financial interest he might have had in the industry. Mr. Kirkwood said that he did not understand that the right hon. gentleman had given up his shares in the collieries, and his point was that colliery owners had benefited, to the detriment of the miners. Until that was disproved he would not admit that he had made a mistake.

The debate was adjourned until to-morrow.

THE ANGLO-FRENCH PACT.

STATEMENT BY LORD CUSHENDUN.

Whilst in the Commons members of the Opposition were pressing the Government for information on the subject of the Naval Pact between this country and France, Lord Cushendun, in the House of Lords, was endeavouring to clear up the misapprehensions of some of their lordships on the subject.

The question was raised by Lord Thomson, who candidly confessed that the apparent innocence of the whole transaction filled him with dismay. It seemed to him that we were giving a great deal and getting very little in return. He hoped that we should see no more of this "demi-semi secret diplomacy" which had given rise to suspicions, and was likely to lead to an increase, rather than a decrease, of armaments.

Lord Cushenden stoutly denied that there had been any secrecy about the matter at all. It was true that the actual terms of the compomise were not disclosed; but if, at that time, he had had any idea that extremely wild and, he was afraid, malicious rumours and innuendoes would arise out of it, he had little doubt that he would have published the full terms, and explained to foreign Governments that the departure from the courtesies of international intercourse was made for a very good reason.

SOURCE OF MISCHIEF.

The mischief began with perfectly unauthenticated statements made by certain French newspapers, suggesting that the compromise covered very much more than it pretended to do—such as some sort of alliance and concerted action by the two Navies. Particularly pernicious and mischievous was the suggestion that because we had arrived at an agreement with one nation it must necessarily imply hostility to some other nation.

There was bound to be give-and-take in such matters, and in order to obtain some limitation we were willing to give up what we certainly desired to have.

Asked definitely by Lord Thomson whether we had committed ourselves, Lord Cushenden replied in the negative. There were, and had been, no commitments. The position was that we must try to find some other way of reaching general agreement on the subject of disarmament.

UNKNOWN MAN'S BODY FOUND AT PORTMARNOCK.

The body of an unknown man was found at Portmarnock, Co. Dublin, at about 10 o'clock yesterday morning by Mr. John Barry, a green-keeper of the Portmarnock golf links. It was in a very decomposed state, and seemed to have been in the water for several weeks.

Last night the Civic Guard at Malahide, who are investigating the affair, had no clue as regards identification. The man, it seems, was about 40 years of age.

An inquest will be held at Portmarnock this evening.

THE BUSINESS OF BANKING.

NORTHERN COMMONS RESOLUTIONS.

The Minister of Commerce, in the Northern House of Commons yesterday, moved two resolutions in relation to stamp duty, to create a banker's licence as such, to replace the present licence to issue unstamped promissory notes—namely, bank notes. A bank will in future pay a licence duty for the privilege of carrying on the business of banking instead of paying for the privilege of issuing unstamped documents. A second amendment of the law relates to stamp duty in relation to the business of banking, and which was independent of the licence duty provision. It related to the payment of composition duty on unstamped bills of exchange and bank post bills (the technical term for bank documents passing between the several offices in connection with clearing house activities). It was rather in the nature of a re-enactment than an amendment, being designed to replace a couple of scattered sections of existing Acts.

It left undisturbed the present arrangement with regard to composition duty on these bills of exchange and bank post bills, the double taxation relief arrangements between Northern Ireland and the Irish Free State making it more convenient that each bank should continue to compound and pay according to the location of its head office in Ireland. That was to say, the Free State Exchequer would receive composition duty on such documents in the case of banks whose head offices were in the Free State, while the duty would accrue to the Northern Ireland Exchequer in the case of banks with their head offices in Northern Ireland. The banks had raised no objection to the arrangement.

It was also proposed to give effect to the undertaking by the Minister of Finance in his Budget statement, that from the 1st June last an entertainment, consisting solely of one or more horse races, would be exempt from the entertainment duty.

The resolutions were adopted.

HOUSING BILL SUBSIDIES.

The Housing Bill, which provides for the continuance of the payment of the housing subsidy until April, 1930, was considered in Committee.

The Minister of Home Affairs (Sir Dawson Bates), replying to Mr. Kyle, stated that all the houses built would have to comply with the specifications laid down. No house received the subsidy unless it was passed by the inspectors.

Mr. Kyle (Lab.) declared that the specification that had been drawn up was not adhered to by a great many of the small builders, who were erecting the smaller type of house, and if that were approximately true, a serious state of affairs was developing in Belfast. The Belfast Corporation had to set up a repair department to repair houses only built a few years.

CALL FOR LARGER HOUSES.

Mr. Davison (Unionist) said that both the Lurgan and Armagh Urban Councils demanded that the subsidy should be given for houses of a larger type than six hundred and fifty superficial feet.

Mr. Cahir Healy (Nat.) urged that the subsidy under the Labourers Acts should be increased to enable Councils to build labourers' houses and let them at rents that the labourers could pay.

Mr. J. Beattie (Labour) expressed surprise that the Government had not agreed to increase the superficial area of the houses.

HOUSES FOR WORKMEN.

The Minister of Finance (Mr. Pollock) said that when the superficial feet was 950 and the subsidy £80 it was found that the class of house built was utterly useless for the working man, as the rents were too high. The Government was asked to do something for the working man, and they agreed to reduce the size of the house and extend the subsidy to £100, plus the amount given by local authorities, which in Belfast was £40. This enabled a kitchen house to be built at rents that the workers could pay, and these were being supplied under the scheme. The housing problem would never adjust itself until there were sufficient houses, and then rents would adjust themselves automatically.

Mr. Black (Unionist) said that he considered that an additional 100 feet should be given for subsidy houses—namely, making the limit 750 superficial feet.

Mr. Devlin supported this suggestion, and declared that the present plan sterotyped the condition of affairs in housing that had revolted all humane minds in the past. They were not solving the housing problem at all, but were laying deeper the roots of discontent amongst the people.

PRIME MINISTER'S STATEMENT.

The Prime Minister (Viscount Craigavon) said that the Government had come to the conclusion, after their previous experience, to endeavour to solve the housing problem from the bottom, and try and get the country flooded with houses the rent of which working men would be able to pay. That was the whole reason why the present scheme was started. The Government never said that 650 feet was the proper size for a house, but they had to deal with the situation as they found it. If they increased the size they would automatically reduce the number of houses that would be built. He felt that they were on the right lines, for fourteen thousand seven hundred and eight houses had been built, and when the subsidy was extended to April, 1930, he believed that fully twenty thousand new houses would be provided. People were paying eight and nine shillings per week for rooms in these houses, and these people should be transferred to homes of their own. This Act was proving a great success, and it would be a cruel thing to run the slightest risk of stopping the building of those houses. When the demand for those houses showed any falling off, then it would be time enough to start some other scheme.

The Committee stage of the bill was passed. The House adjourned.

NEW GARAGES IN RATHMINES.

RESIDENTS' PROTEST.

At yesterday's meeting of the Rathmines Urban Council, at which Mrs. M. S. Kettle presided, a letter was received from Mr. John J. McDonald, solicitor, on behalf of residents of Sunbury Gardens, protesting against the erection of six garages which, it was declared, would create a nuisance in the district and seriously damage the value of the property.

In addition a deputation of three female residents waited on the Council, and it was decided to send the matter to the Housing and Buildings Committee, and Mr. Lambert was instructed to point out the risk that was being taken in proceeding with the buildings without authority from the Council.

The Chairman said that if the bye-laws were being contravened Mr. Baskin might be ordered to take the buildings down.

On the suggestion of Mrs. Johnson, seconded by Mr. Gogan, it was decided to call the Town Planning Committee again into operation to deal with such questions as the present one.

Messrs. Gogan and Ireland drew attention to somewhat similar work which was being done at Palmerston Gardens.

DEATH OF TWO SISTERS AND BROTHER.

CAVAN FAMILY WIPED OUT IN A WEEK.

Two sisters and their brother, all over 70, who kept a small fruit and confectionery business at Chapel Swanlinbar, County Cavan, have died within the last week. Miss Mary Nolan (70) died suddenly last Thursday. Her brother, John (72), died as her funeral was leaving for the cemetery last Saturday. As his funeral was leaving the village on Monday the death took place of Miss Bridget Nolan (74).

Civic Guards discovered in the house bank receipts amounting to more than £1,500, certificates of investments, bank notes, silver, and a quantity of gold. The only known relatives are a brother and sister, who are in America.

O'Flaherty, Miss Penrose, Mrs. Clarke and Mrs. Robinson.

QUESTIONS IN THE DAIL.

COMMUNIST FIASCO IN DUBLIN.

"ADVANCED THINKERS" AGAINST PEACE.

ANTI-KELLOGG PLAN FOILED BY POLICE

In Dail Eireann yesterday,

Mr. E. COONEY (F.F., Dublin N.) asked the Minister for Justice if he could give the reason for the raid by members of the Civic Guard on the premises of the James Connolly Workers' Club, 47 Parnell square, Dublin, on August 30th last, when they removed and destroyed papers, etc., the property of the club.

Mr. FitzGERALD-KENNEY said that on the evening of the 30th August the police received information which showed that a group of Communists were organising a hostile demonstration against the Peace Pact and against a distinguished foreign visitor. Part of the plan was to organise a procession through the streets calculated to lead to a breach of the peace. A number of placards and sticks, with offensive, treasonable inscriptions thereon, were to have been carried. These were the articles which were seized; it was not proposed to return them.

Mr. COONEY asked if the Minister considered that a pamphlet on Imperialism by Eleanor Byrne was such as required to be suppressed in the interest of the progress of the Free State Ministry. A cardboard poster also had been seized. Did the Government object to a demonstration being organised under the auspices of the Connolly Workers' Club? On what information did the Minister rely that this was a Communist demonstration, and was not the Connolly Workers' Club at liberty to organise a demonstration to propagate their views as advanced thinkers in the workers' movement?

Mr. FitzGERALD-KENNEY said that he had not seen the pamphlet, and could not express any opinion about it. He did not know whether the demonstration was to be a Communist one or not, but there were placards, "Up with Russia" and "Long live Soviet Russia."

Mr. MacENTEE (F.F., Dublin County) asked if Communist demonstrations were to be suppressed.

Mr. FitzGERALD-KENNEY—A Communist procession or any other procession that might lead to a breach of the peace would be prohibited.

THE NELSON PILLAR.

In reply to a question by Mr. P. S. DOYLE (Dublin S.),

Mr. MULCAHY, Minister for Local Government, said that the question of the removal of the Nelson Pillar, Dublin, was one for the Dublin City Commissioners. He was not aware of any definite intention on their part in the matter.

ENGLISH LIBEL ON IRISH CATTLE.

Dr. RYAN (F.F., Wexford) asked the Minister for Agriculture whether his attention had been drawn to a paragraph in the Daily Chronicle of October 20th stating that ninety per cent. of the livers of Irish cattle were affected; whether there was any foundation for this statement, and, if not, whether he intended to take any action against the newspaper in the matter.

Mr. HOGAN (Minister for Agriculture)—The reply to the first portion of the question is in the affirmative. The statement in question, which appears to have been made on behalf of the defence in a case against certain butchers charged in Yorkshire with offences under the meat regulations, is entirely without foundation, and the Department had already taken steps, through the office of the High Commissioner in London, with a view to counteracting any injurious impression created by the paragraph referred to. In regard to the concluding portion of the question, I am advised that no action lies against the newspaper referred to in respect of the publication by it of the report of the proceedings at the court.

FINANCIAL HELP FOR FARMERS

WHAT THE GOVERNMENT IS DOING.

Mr. BLYTHE, Minister for Finance (for President Cosgrave), replying to a question by Mr. J. F. O'Hanlon (Ind., Cavan) said that the Government had continuously under consideration proposals for the purpose of assisting farmers in the present depressed condition of agriculture, and had within the past few years made provision for the granting of loans to co-operative societies on easy terms; for the making of loans to co-operative creamery societies; for the re-organisation of the dairy industry, and for the establishment of the beet-sugar industry, and had provided the major portion of the capital of the Agricultural Credit Corporation. He was aware that complaints had been made to the effect that in some cases farmers requiring capital to re-stock their land, or to carry out necessary improvements, found it difficult to obtain such capital owing to the requirements of the joint stock banks, and the Agricultural Credit Corporation in the matter of security. The experience of the working of the Agricultural Credit Corporation Act, 1927, was not yet sufficient to enable a sound judgment to be formed as to what extension, if any, was necessary to the provision of agricultural credits.

INDEBTEDNESS TO BANKS.

In answer to a question by Mr. Matthew O'Reilly (F.F., Meath) as to taking steps to alleviate in some way the position of numerous farmers who were seriously indebted to the banks,

Mr. BLYTHE said that he was satisfied that the only practical method of affording financial assistance to farmers who were indebted to the banks was through the medium of the Agricultural Credit Corporation; and he could not accept the statement of the Deputy that the method was applicable only to a small number of cases. The Corporation had power to make a loan to any farmer for the purpose of paying off a loan originally made to him, either for the purchase of land or for any purpose for which the Corporation might now lend; and the Corporation was prepared to give the most favourable consideration possible to all applicants.

In answer to Mr. M. O'Reilly,

Mr. BLYTHE said that the Agricultural Credit Corporation had informed him that they had made many loans to farmers whose lands were not yet vested, and numerous other cases of this kind were under consideration, where, it was hoped, loans could be made. The Corporation was in close touch with the Irish Land Commission in regard to these matters, and arrangements had been made to facilitate as far as possible applicants for loans whose lands were not yet vested. As regards the cases of applicants who hold their lands only under a "letting for temporary convenience," it was not possible for these farmers to give a valid charge on their lands to the Corporation as security for a loan, but the Corporation was prepared in such cases to consider applications on the basis of personal security. In addition, farmers of this class might obtain money from Agricultural Credit Societies, which, as the deputy was aware, were assisted by the loan of money from the State on easy terms.

SECONDARY TEACHERS' SALARIES.

INCREMENTAL SCHEME.

Rules issued yesterday by the Irish Free State Minister for Education provide for the payment of incremental salary, calculated on the length of approved teaching service, to recognised teachers in secondary schools. The scales, based on the total number of completed years of approved teaching service, will be: (a) Men—Ten annual increments of £12 each, and subsequently six annual increments of £15 each. (b) Women—Twelve annual increments of £10 each, and, in addition, two increments of £20 each in the case of men and women holding an honours degree (1st or 2nd class) of an Irish or British university, or a university degree or diploma accepted by the Minister as equivalent thereto.

The conditions governing the payment of the incremental salary are fully set out in the rules, which may be purchased from Messrs. Eason for 2d.

NEW HIGH "RECORDS" AMONG STOCKS.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.
NEW YORK, Wednesday.

Stocks opened with a strong tone. Wall Street celebrated the election of Mr. Hoover as President by staging a vigorous bullish demonstration, and the early gains of 2 to 10 points were well maintained, despite heavy profit-taking, with over a score of issues, fourteen of which were Oils, setting up new high "records" for the year. The announcement of stock split-ups by the National Sugar Refining Company and some of the smaller companies, coupled with a prediction for at least two years more good business by Mr. Arthur Cutten, one of Wall Street's largest operators, helped to stimulate enthusiasm. The buying centred largely in Oils, Coppers, Merchandise issues, and Public Utilities, the latter being supported in view of Mr. Hoover's publicly announced stand on the power question. Kennecott Copper crossed 135, and Anaconda Copper 95, while Woolworth, Consolidated Gas, American and Foreign Power, and Commonwealth Power rose substantially, and National Bellas, Hess Co., Jewel Tea, and American Railway Express advanced 5 to 8 points. Extensive buying of Coppers and Oils, together with a heavy absorption in Airplanes and Chain Stores, featured the late dealings, and many of the early gains were materially extended. Curtiss and Wright Aero gained about 12 points, and Greene Cananea 9. The market closed strong. The "ticker" was 45 minutes late. Government Bonds quiet; Railroad Bonds irregular. The day's sales totalled 4,895,000 shares.

WINNIPEG GRAINS.

WHEAT opened steady, ⅛c. down to unchanged. Weak cable advices and reports stating that cutting of wheat in the Northern Argentine will commence in a week's time, caused early declines, and the downward movement was assisted by reports intimating that British flour mills are buying good grades of Argentine wheat for November shipment at a shilling below the price of No. 3 Northern Manitobas. NEW YORK COTTON.

COTTON was steady at the opening, but 2 to 7 points lower. The market was depressed by pre-Bureau liquidation and Southern hedge selling on the favourable weekly weather report, and the tendency to raise crop ideas. The demand was slow, but the trade continued to buy on the scale-down. The closing was barely steady at 23 to 13 points loss. Spot quiet and 20 points down. The New York Cotton Exchange members estimate the production will amount to 14,162,000 running bales. The average based on private estimates works out at 14,003,000 running bales. New Orleans futures opened 6 points up to a point down. Around 11.45 December fell back to 18.23, January to 18.26, March 18.22, May 18.10, and July 17.98; then recoveries set in, and at 1.45 December touched 18.30, January 18.31, March 18.26, and May 18.11. The market finished 21 to 32 points lower. Spot declined 29 points. Spot, middling upland at New York, 19.00.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Wednesday.

WHEAT opened steady, ⅛c. up to ⅛c. down. The falling of excellent rains over the central South-West and a bearish Kansas State report, together with large North-Western carlot receipts, a poor export demand, and substantial increase in the world's visible supply, depressed values. The market closed easy at declines of 1¼c. to 2c. Spot easy.

ACT TO REGULATE HOTEL CHARGES.

TOURIST ASSOCIATION'S PROPOSAL.

BRINGING PROPRIETORS INTO LINE.

At the meeting of the Cattle Exporters' Association, held in the City Arms Hotel, Dublin, last night, Mr. C. D. Crowley, Chairman, presided.

With reference to a complaint about alleged excessive hotel charges, Mr. J. P. O'Brien, Secretary of the Irish Tourist Association, wrote that in the absence of any legislative powers they could not bring any influence to bear on hotel proprietors, but they were seeking a legislative remedy for this very serious source of complaint.

The Chairman said that it was essential that overcharging should be stopped, and legislative action afforded the only solution.

ONE-WAY TRAFFIC IN THURLES.

The Secretary, Mr. John Fleming, said that he had written to the Clerk of the Thurles Urban Council regarding the unnecessary hardship and abuse to which cattle were subjected on fair days in Thurles, owing to the congestion of the streets leading to the railway station.

It was reported that a deputation from the Association had met the Thurles Urban Council before the last fair, and the Council had agreed to the one-way traffic. This rule had been carried into effect on fair day, with the result that the members of the Association were facilitated in every way.

The Secretary was directed to write, thanking the Council.

LIVE STOCK EXPORTS.

The returns from the Department of Lands and Agriculture for the week ending October 27th, 1928, showed that 20,919 cattle, 9,456 sheep, 6,820 pigs, 71 horses, 13 goats, and one ass, making a total of 37,280 animals, were exported from Free State ports.

The grand total for all Irish ports was 46,013.

The total number of animals exported from the Irish Free State for the period January 1st to October 27th, 1928, was 1,204,194, as against a total of 1,122,684 for the same period in 1927.

YESTERDAY IN THE DAIL.

Mr. BOLAND—In case of necessity—in the event of war?

President COSGRAVE—No.

Mr. BOLAND—Has this Government absolute control, and can they hand it over to anybody they like?

President COSGRAVE said that the Government was free to let the property to anybody, subject to a limited lease of ninety-nine years, which was set out in Article 11 of the Constitution.

Mr. CORRY (F.F., Cork, E.) said that he realised that the problem that had to be faced was a difficult one, but they were not getting value for the money. Cobh (Queenstown) had been reduced to the position of a third class harbour because it lacked facilities for supplying oil to oil-burning vessels.

Mr. DE VALERA asked what was the total value of the machinery at Haulbowline.

Mr. BURKE—I could not give the total value of the machinery.

Mr. DE VALERA—We should have some idea as to why we are spending this money. Is this money to be spent from year to year without any idea of what we are spending it for?

President COSGRAVE asked if Mr. de Valera wanted to know the original value, present value, or what.

Mr. DE VALERA said that he wanted to know its value at the moment.

On a division, the estimate for £7,400 was adopted by 83 votes to 55, Mr. Corry (F.F., Cork, E.) voting with the Government.

THE STATIONERY OFFICE.

On a vote for £34,999 to complete the sum necessary to defray the expenses of the Stationery Office,

Mr. MacENTEE (F.F., Dublin Co.) said that his party were not opposing this vote because they regarded this department as essential. It was very desirable that they should encourage the general public to take an interest in the cost of the Public Services, and he would like to see clubs and public libraries supplied with copies of the Estimates and Appropriation Account free.

Mr. ANTHONY said that provincial printers, when carrying out printing contracts for the Government, should be compelled to observe the conditions of the fair wages clause. At present, in many cases, firms tried to evade the conditions. He hoped that in time all official documents and school requisites would be of Irish manufacture.

Mr. CASSIDY (Labour, Donegal) urged that the printing of the Regsters of Voters should be done in the various constituencies concerned, instead of having them printed centrally in Dublin.

Progress was reported, and the debate was adjourned until to-day.

BETTING ACT INQUIRY.

Mr. P. S. DOYLE (Government, Dublin S.) said that the Committee of Selection had nominated the following deputies to serve on the Joint Committee to inquire into, and report on, the working of the Betting Act:—Messrs. Anthony, A. Byrne, Cooper, P. S. Doyle, MacEntee, Ruttledge, and Shaw.

The following have been nominated to serve on the Committee to consider the desirability of amending the Local Authorities (Officers and Employés) Act:—Messrs. Brady, F. H. Crowley, Doherty, Esmonde, T. Hennessy, M. Jordan, T. J. Murphy, Myles, S. T. O'Kelly, Mahony, and Ward.

The Selection Committee has discharged Deputy Aiken from the Committee on Procedure and Privileges, and has appointed Deputy S. T. O'Kelly in his stead.

The House adjourned until 3 p.m. to-day.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES.

TONE AND COMMENT.

DUBLIN BRISKER.

LEADING TOBACCOS FLUCTUATE SHARPLY.

There was again a fair share of cheerful fluctuating business passing on 'Change, with one or two outstanding irregular features, such as the further buoyant movement in Imperial Tobacco shares on a continuance of heavy and persistent support from the other side, largely associated with conclusions drawn from the recent "Bat" bonus scheme and the feeling that the turn of the company was at hand; but British-Americans suffered a heavy fall. The Funds varied but little in a very idle market. Dublin Corporation Stocks were all wanted. Banking securities had a strong upward tendency, with Bank Stock and Nationals prominent. Hibernians recovered portion of the recent set-back. Dublin Distillers became more settled, and prices were harder. Guinness Ordinary closed under best, but active and a shade firmer on the day. J. Power and Son Pref. again were bid for. Marconi 10s. shares did not hold all the previous day's gain. Rails remain stagnant, with quite limited dealing. Great Southern issues closed dull, despite an actual increase in last week's traffic. Dublin United Tram Debentures remain wanted. In Drapery shares Pim Bros. Debentures fell a couple of points, and others closed firm. There was great irregularity in leading Tobacco shares. British-Americans were banged down no less than 5s. further, while Imperials further advanced 3s. to 132s. 9d., the highest point yet reached. Courtaulds were busier and closed active at higher prices. A broken lot of Alex. Thom 4½ per cent. Debentures realised 63, or 3⅜ over last "business done" level. Tobacco Securities Trust issues were active, but closed under best.

LONDON UNCERTAIN.

REACTION FOLLOWS INITIAL STRENGTH.

The London Stock markets as a whole presented an active appearance during the early hours yesterday, there being considerable buying orders from America, following the result of the Presidential election. Principal attention was directed to American favourites, such as Victors, Columbias, Gramophones, Mond Nickels, Imperial Tobaccos and Marconis, but after going appreciably higher prices suffered a setback, though as a rule the tendency remained quite firm. In other directions, Breweries made a firm showing, as did Oils and Mines, while Rubber shares, although by no means active, were marked firmer in a number of directions. A fair volume of business was transacted in the Gilt-edged section, but the final quotations were mostly unaltered from Tuesday. Interest in Foreign Government Stocks continued on a small scale, but a steady to firm tone ruled, and values where altered were usually put higher. Idle conditions again ruled in Home Rails, and Colonial and Foreign Rails remained quiet.

As mentioned above, American buying was responsible for the Industrial sections opening with an active appearance, but towards midday interest became less pronounced, and the best levels were not always maintained. Marconis made a firm start, but eased off later, as did Imperial Tobaccos, while "Gramo" descriptions generally finished substantially below the best values touched. Breweries were again a firm section, Meux's jumping further forward on the suggestion that there may be a bonus of some description. Artsilks and Textiles stiffened in several directions, though British Celanese were an erratic market. Mond Nickels were a strong spot, touching 7⅛ at one time, but they were finally unaltered on the day. Among Miscellaneous Industrials, Ner-Sag and Overseas, Turner and Newall, United Molasses, Bell's Asbestos, Gordon Hotels and Consolidated Fur Farms were put better. Considerable interest was displayed in Oils and higher values were reached. Among Mines, Rio Tinto made a good showing and Kaffirs and Tins were firmer.

LOCKWOOD'S CLEAN COAL PROCESS.

As an outcome of the arrangements come to whereby the Coppee Company of Great Britain are to co-operate with Lockwood's Clean Coal Process, Ltd., Mr. J. B. Glass, a director of the former company, has joined the board of Lockwood's Clean Coal Process, Ltd. Important developments may be expected in the Lockwood company as the result of this arrangement, as there is no firm in Europe with more experience in coal cleaning than the Coppee Company. It will be remembered that quite recently an Australian contract, which amounted to approximately £1,000,000, was secured by the Coppee Company.

BRITISH GOVERNMENT BORROWING.

The feature of the British revenue return was once again the light thrown upon the Government's method of financing itself at the present time. On the week ended Saturday last there was a further large increase in the volume of Treasury bills outstanding and an almost corresponding reduction in other forms of floating debt. On this occasion the Bank of England has been repaid £1,000,000 and the public Departments £12,200,000. Over the past quarter this policy has resulted in an increase in the Treasury bill issue of nearly £83,000,000, while the loans from the Departments are down by almost £80,000,000. Substantial fluctuations are, of course, to be looked for in these items; but the persistence of the movement on this occasion appears to point to a change of policy. In the first instance the bills have in part not been offered in the market but to the Bank or the Departments, so that the actual effect of the change is difficult to trace.

RIO TINTO COMPANY.

The dispute between the Rio Tinto Company, the Spanish mining enterprise of which Sir Auckland Geddes is chairman, and the Spanish Government, which alleged that taxation payments were being evaded, has been settled by the voluntary payment of £300,000 by the company. The Spanish Government had alleged that the copper content of the ore had been understated, and that, therefore, export tax payments were not fully accounted for. This was strenuously denied by the company. The Spanish Cabinet has announced that it will take no further action in consideration of the voluntary payment offered by the company.

SWEDISH MATCH MONOPOLY IN LATVIA.

The Communist group in the Latvian Parliament has received instructions from Moscow to pursue obstructionist tactics when the agreement with the Swedish Match Company comes up for debate. The purpose is to hold over the ratification as long as possible. The agreement, which gives the Swedish Match Company a monopoly for 35 years and obtains a $6,000,000 loan for Latvia, was signed in June last, and requires ratification before 6th December.

FIRM'S "GIFT" WAGES.

A remarkable advertisement appeared in the Birmingham Post, in which a company in the North of England, being compelled to discharge men, say they will contribute £2 per week for twelve months towards the wages paid to them by anyone who will employ them at not less than 55s. weekly, with prospects of a permanency. The name of the firm is not divulged.

RHODESIAN COTTON AND TOBACCO.

Lieutenant-Colonel Sir John R. Chancellor, late Governor of Southern Rhodesia, was the guest of the British Cotton Growing Association in Manchester. In a few years he believed Southern Rhodesia would be producing a cotton crop measured in tens of thousands of bales, while as to the country's tobacco cultivation he was told that Rhodesian tobacco was the best Imperial tobacco grown, and was sure it would in a few years become a staple crop of the country.

PERU CORPORATION'S RAILWAYS.

It was officially announced yesterday that the directors of the Peruvian Corporation had received a cable from their representative in Lima advising that the bill for perpetuity of the railways has passed both Houses of the Peruvian Congress. This means that the agreement reached between the board of the company and the Peruvian Government has received the necessary ratification.

INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

BELL ASBESTOS FAVOURED.

TOBACCOS ERRATIC.

As anticipated, trading in the Industrial market commenced earlier than usual yesterday. The tone at the opening was good, following the result of the American elections, but as the session progressed an irregular tendency developed, and most of the earlier gains were lost before the close of business. In the Mechanical Music section Victors went ahead at first, but fell back later, with the rest of the group closing uncertain. Mond Nickels met with further support, as did International Nickels, while Thornycrofts continued under the influence of the excellent report figures. Breweries were again active, though subject to profit-snatching in places. Tobaccos attracted further attention, "Imps" being well supported in the early dealings. Later they fell back somewhat, together with "Bats."

Victors went ahead to 138 at one time, but this brought out sellers, and they eventually finished with a net decline of 3 at 133. Columbia Graphophones touched 13 5/16, but reacted later to 13, with Gramophones closing ⅛ easier on balance at 13⅝. Vocalions 4 bid in the early dealings, only to give way later to 3 15/16. Duophones gave way further to 2⅜, with Edison Bell Ordinary closing steady at 1 11/16. Of the cheaper shares, Deccas shed a few pence at 32s. 7½d., British Brunswick Ordinary at 8s., Goodsons to 11s., and Electramonic Foreign Rights at 3s. Dominion Gramophones Deferred stiffened to 2s. 10½d. Gramophone Records Deferred to 1s. 10½d., Selectas to 1s. 10½d., and Symphony Gramophone and Radio to par.

Mond Nickels rose to 7 at first, and International Nickels to 205, but sellers appeared at these levels, and they receded later to 6⅞ and 201, respectively. Thornycrofts continued in active request throughout, finishing 2s. to the good at 68s. 3d. Chinese Engineering strengthened to 3⅜, and Buell Combustions to 2½, but the rest of the Iron and Steel section proved rather undecided. South Durham Steels gave way 1/16 to 1⅝, with Continuous Coal Carbonisation "B" shares marked down ⅛ to 2⅛.

There was rather more doing in the Shipping section, where a renewed demand sprang up for P. and O. Deferred, which finished 9d. up at 56s. 9d. Canada Steamship further advanced ½ to 40, and Cunards were inquired for at 32s. 6d.

Apart from Employers' Liability, which continued in favour around 91s. 6d. Insurance shares remained on the dull side.

Active dealings were again witnessed in the Tobacco section, but price movements made a mixed showing. "Imps." further advanced to 133s. 3d. when the market opened, but they could not maintain this level, and at the close the price receded to 131s., which left them 6d. easier on the day. "Bats" gradually receded to 6 1/16, a loss of 3/16, with Tobacco Securities Trust Ord. marked down ¼ to 3 3/16, the Deferred closing steady around 1 5/16. Carreras strengthened ¼ to 17 11/16, and "Imps." of Canada gained 1s. at 47s. Verellen Ordinary, however, finished on the dull side at 25s. 6d., and the Preference at 28s.

Quite a good business was again witnessed among the leading Brewery issues. Meux's Ord. continued to change hands freely up to 12¼, but the closing price of 11⅞ left them ⅛ easier on balance. Bass, Courage, Ind Coope, Mitchell and Butlers, and Watney Def. remained in favour, but there was some selling of Allsopps, the Ord. receding to 38s. and the Pref. to 137½. Ashbys Ord. were offered around 57s., and Taylor Walkers eased to 39s. 3d. Ushers Wiltshire were favoured around 42s. on reported buying for control by one of the larger undertakings.

Stores, Catering and Food Supply shares were rather more active. Spiers and Pond were in renewed demand, and jumped up 2s. 3d. to 36s. 9d., with Schweppes Def. harder at 56s 6d., and United Dairies at 34s. 6d. Liptons, however, shed a few pence to 6s. 9d., and Crosse and Blackwell Ord. to 6s. 9d.

Steady support was forthcoming for some of the Electrical descriptions. Of the Equipments, Ever-Ready continued in the ascendant, gaining 9d. at 30s. A new company, with a capital of £1,000,000, is expected to make its appearance shortly in which "rights" will accrue to Ever-Ready shareholders. Johnson and Phillips stiffened to 39s. 6d., Metro-Vickers to 33s. 9d., and English Electrics to 6s. 9d.

Among Supply Shares County of London rose 1s. 6d. to 44s. 3d. Atlas Light and Power Ord., however, were dull at 19s. 3d.

Artificial Silks generally were a better market. British Celanese enjoyed a rally to 2½ at the opening, but they eased from the best, closing, however ⅛ up on balance. Canadian Celanese held at 6, but American Celanese Common lost the turn at 12. Courtaulds came in for renewed attention, and gained 1/16 at 4 7/16, with Snia Viscosa 6d. harder at 29s. 6d.

Textiles showed little variation, but a few buying orders trickled through from the North for Fine Cotton Spinners, which put on 6d. to 45s. 6d.

Although there was not a great deal doing among Cements the tendency was harder. British Cement Products and Finance Ord. stiffened to 4 3/16, and the Deferred to 36s. Greaves, Bull and Lakin Ord. were in renewed evidence, advancing 4½d. to 8s. 10½d. It is understood that the latter company has completed negotiations for the acquisition of an allied business, a step which should materially improve their profit-earning capacity. No increase in capital will be necessary.

The Canadian-American group maintained a firm front. Brazilian Traction Common had buyers around 74½, and Mexico Trams at 54½. British Columbia Power "A" and "B" Shares continued in active request around $55 and $45, respectively. Land and Investment Shares proved easier, Forestals receding a few pence to 28s. 9d., and Anglo-Eastern Finance to 29s. 3d.

Buyers came forward for some of the Motor shares, Dennis hardening to 3 7/16, Napiers to 52s., Singer Ord. to 38s. 9d., and S.T.D. Motors to 5s. 3d. Humbers, however, finished dull at 20s., and Leylands at 26s.

Cable and Wireless issues maintained a fairly steady appearance pending further developments, though Marconi eased slightly at the finish to 76s. 9d., and Marconi Marines to 54s. 6d. Radio Corporation were favoured with an advance of a point to 49.

Little disposition was shown to give support to Nitrate shares, but Lautaros closed a firm spot at 4 9/16. New Tamarugals, however, weakened 2s. to 30s., and British and South Pacific Trading eased to 30s. 6d.

In other directions, Bells United Asbestos were a strong feature in anticipation of favourable developments, closing ½ to the good at 4 5/16, with shares changing hands up to 86s. 10½d. Turner and Newall also continued active in this respect around 89s. Harrisons and Crosfield Defd. were also in favour, and put on ¼ to 7 5/16. Pinchin Johnson improved ⅛ to 7⅞, and Crittalls 1s. to 58s.; James Finlay hardened 1/16 to 5 5/16. The Swedish issues remained dullish. Dunlops were better at 26s. Consolidated Fur Farms Ord. were in active request, eventually finishing 1s. 3d. to the good at 7s. bid.

OIL MARKET AGAIN SATISFACTORY.

Transactions in Oil shares yesterday were on only a moderate scale, but generally a satisfactory tendency prevailed. The majority of the leaders commanded a good deal of attention, and while the best levels were not fully maintained closing values were still appreciably higher in many instances. Following a satisfactory turnover, in the course of which the shares fluctuated between 5⅞ and 5 31/32, Shells closed either side of the latter price, showing an improvement of 1/16, the bearer shares rising to 5 15/16. In the early hours Royal Dutch were bid for and advanced to 38⅜, but they receded to 38, rallying in the late dealings to 38½, the result of the day's business being a gain of ¼. Strength continued to be displayed by Pan-American "B" shares, and the price further advanced $1 to $60. Buying orders were received for Burmahs, which, after touching 5, finished with a gain of 1/32 at 4 31/32. On the other hand, Anglo-Persians suffered from moderate realisations and fell 1/16 to 4 13/32; the 8 p.c. Pref. improved 3d. to 26s. 3d. Anglo-Americans rose 1/16 to 3⅞. Following the publication of highly satisfactory production figures, V.O.C. Holdings met with a fair amount of attention, while there was again talk of the possibility of an early announcement regarding the result of the arbitration in the matter of the sales contract. After touching 4⅛, however, the shares receded to the overnight's level of 4 3/32, the Prefs. also finishing unchanged at 4. In the Trinidad group, active attention was directed to Trinidad Leaseholds. At one time the shares were as good as 4⅛, while the final price of 4 3/32 left them 3/32 up on the day. In other directions, improvements of 1/32 were marked in Anglo-Egyptian "B" at 2 11/32 and in Anglo-Ecuadorians at 1 11/16, small gains also occurring in British Borneos and Tankers Prefs.

RUBBER SHARES FIRM.

Despite the fact that a quiet and slightly easier tendency ruled in the commodity market, and that the volume of business passing in the share market was not noticeably larger, Rubber shares displayed quite a firm appearance, and at the close of the day some substantial improvements were scored. In the commodity market spot and November fetched 8 11/16d. per pound., December 8⅞d. per pound, and April to June 9¼d. to 9 5/16d. per pound.

LONDON MINING MARKET IRREGULAR.

MANY CAPE FAVOURITES AT LOWER LEVELS.

A fair volume of business was transacted in the Mining Market yesterday, but movements on the day were irregular. Apparently, Johannesburg takes a rather more serious view of the political situation in the Union than is entertained on this side. At any rate, advices from that centre were not particularly encouraging, and, as support was lacking, many of the Cape favourites were allowed to drift. Thus City Deep were a dull spot, and Modderfontein Crown Mines, Sub-Nigel, Consolidated Main Reef and one or two others sought lower levels. Paris was by no means aggressive, though the further improvement in Central Mining may be partly attributed to buying from that quarter. Of the other finance descriptions Union Corporation advanced, and Rand Mines, "Johnnies," and Mozambique all left off as on Tuesday. The Rhodesian department presented a rather brighter appearance, though Chartered still lacked support, and again finished lower. There was again a good inquiry for Lonely, which left off higher. Mashaba further strengthened, and Bwana M'Kubwa and the other Northern issues were well maintained. In the Diamond section attention was again mainly directed to Consolidated, Shares and Options marking improvements. De Beers and Jagersfontein were ignored, both here and in Paris. There was a further rise of £1 2s. 6d. to £231 11s. 3d. per ton in the price of tin; but it failed to stimulate activity in the share market. London Tin, Pengkalen and one or two others strengthened; but Tin Selection and Anglo-Oriental Ord. receded the turn. Associated in the Nigerian list were also dull, and the Bauchis suffered from a little profit-taking. There was further good buying of Rio Tinto on home and Paris account, and the price again advanced sharply. Other Coppers were dull. Lena in the Russian list strengthened, and Vipond among Canadians moved up. Elsewhere San Francisco and Burma receded, but otherwise little movement was shown. Closing prices:—

THE MONEY MARKET.

LOANS STRINGENT.

Owing to the usual mid-week window-dressing operations of the joint stock banks, floating credit was in short supply yesterday, 5 p.c. being freely paid for fresh advances over the night. The market, however, just managed to repay the moderate amount falling due at the Bank of England. Old money was renewed generally at 4 p.c.

In the discount market the tone, if anything, was easier, there being a little Continental inquiry for three months' commercial bills at 4 11/32 p.c. Two months' paper was quoted at 4 5/16 p.c., three and four months' at 4⅜ p.c., and six months' at 4 7/16 p.c. The banks were buying December bills at 4⅛ p.c. for delivery to-day. The "hot" Treasuries were offered at 4⅜ p.c.

The Bank of England announced the receipt of 2,000,000 sovereigns from Spain and the sale of bar gold valued at £523,000. Gold was restored to 84s. 11½d. per fine oz. Owing to selling by China banks silver was fixed 1/16d. lower at 26⅝d. for spot and 26 11/16d. per oz. for forward delivery. The Indian bazaars bought at the lower level. Business was on a small scale.

No further alteration took place in the New York or Montreal exchanges. Germany moved a little in our favour, the Berlin rate rising to 20.35¾; and Belgian belgas were rather cheaper, but Dutch guilders further appreciated, the Amsterdam rate declining to 12.08¼, which compares with 12.10 about the middle of September, the current rate being the lowest since August 1 last. Austrian schillings improved, and Italian lire were a trifle dearer. The only movement of note in the Eastern exchanges was a recovery of the yen to 1s. 11 1/16d.

ARTIFICIAL SILK MARKET.

MANCHESTER, Wednesday.

Many makers of artificial silk fabrics have still portion of their machinery idle, and until the demand broadens out considerably there can be little hope of restarting it. Buying for the home trade and the Colonies has tapered off to some extent, except in the case of high-class dress goods, which are still being taken in important quantities, especially for Canada and Australia.

Makers of linings and heavy furnishing cloths have booked a number of modest orders, and there is business about in casement cloths, tapestries, and various styles of printed fabrics.

Brazil and the Dutch East Indies are the best of the overseas markets, and are placing orders regularly for cloths containing a high percentage of artificial silk.

Demand from India and China is extremely sluggish, and only sorting up lots are mentioned for the Near East, the African markets and the Continent.

Yarns of all qualities are selling less freely.

Please, Mummy!

When the water is coming out of the tap like a roaring lion and the ducks and the goldfish are swimming on the terrible waves—then Mother often adds to the bath just one thing more. She melts a Reckitt's Bath Cube in the water. Down it goes! And then the water is so nice and soft and smells so sweet and when you get out you are like a fairy that's had a bath in a flower. Mother says so. And Mother knows it has restored and refreshed the little body that has been on the go all day.

Reckitt's Bath Cubes can be obtained at all Grocers, Stores, etc., at 2d. each or in dainty cartons of six for 1/-.

To-day the doors of the new Plaza Restaurant will be flung wide in welcome to all who appreciate good food served in an atmosphere of comfort, luxury, refinement, and good taste.

Furnishing and fittings are on a sumptuous scale never before seen in Ireland. Shaded lights, soft carpets and sweet music create an air of distinction in which every meal is a banquet.

Cleanliness, method, and efficiency seem inevitable in such surroundings, and the aim of the proprietors is to give a new meaning to the word Service as applied to catering. All cooking is done by Gas.

600 to 1,000 people can sit down at table and every patron can be assured that each morsel has been prepared by one of the eight French Chefs who work under the direction of the head chef, lately Chef de Cuisine at the famous Palais George V., Paris. Six Irish boys are also undergoing training here as chefs at the request of our progressive Ministry of Industry and Commerce.

There is a menu at which you stare in amazement. Such variety suggests an organisation so complex and clever that the average man is lost in admiration and the most fickle appetite becomes lively at a reading. Come to-day, or as soon after as possible, and give yourself a treat.

YESTERDAY'S CASES IN THE COURTS.

THE CLANDILLON LIBEL ACTION.

EXPERT WITNESSES CALLED FOR THE DEFENCE.

Expert evidence was called for the defence yesterday in the Clandillon libel action, which is being tried before Mr. Justice Hanna and a jury in the High Courts, Dublin. Mr. O'Sullivan, one of the defendants, was again under cross-examination for some hours, after which Mr. Herbert Hughes, a musical critic, and Professor Bergin, of University College, Dublin, gave evidence as to their opinion of the plaintiffs' book and Mr. O'Sullivan's review.

The plaintiffs are Seamus Clandillon, Director Dublin Broadcasting Station, and his wife, Maighread Ni Annagain; and the defendants, Donal J. O'Sullivan, Clerk of the Senate; G. W. Russell ("A.E."), Editor Irish Statesman; and the Irish Statesman Publishing Company. The plaintiffs claim £2,000 damages for alleged libel in a review of the book of old Irish airs, "Londubh an Chairn," written by Mr. O'Sullivan, and published in the Irish Statesman. I defence of the review fair comment is pleaded.

A BOOK OF SONGS.

WHAT THE PUBLIC EXPECTS.

Resuming his cross-examination of Mr. O'Sullivan, one of the defendants, Mr. Martin Maguire, K.C., asked—Is it any harm for the Clandillons to collect into one book songs which they had already published and which were out of print?—In buying a book of songs one expects to get something new.

You have a craze for novelty?—Something fresh which one has not seen before.

Is it your case that the Clandillons have been parading before the public in this country for over a quarter of a century with appalling ignorance of already existing works on this subject of folk music?—It is my case that they showed themselves ignorant of standard collections.

Do you say that they have been masquerading before the public with a pretended knowledge that they did not have?—Since 1904 they have published nothing on their own.

They have sung these songs, written articles and brought out books—who has a better right to sing songs?—They have written no scholarly or analytical articles on Irish music or poetry.

You mean that they have not risen to your standard?—I do not put it in that fashion.

Your idea of the Gaelic tradition in this country is that it is taken from a book?—There is very little tradition about that song (indicating a particular song).

The witness added that he had already stated in the plainest terms that he expressly disclaimed any professional imputation against either Mr. or Mrs. Clandillon.

Although you have instructed counsel here to rake up the past thirty years to see if anything could be brought against them?—When I am brought here on a charge of libel it is incumbent on me to take all possible steps to have my character vindicated.

And you think that you can vindicate your own character by slinging mud at the Clandillons?—If I had contributed to the papers articles of the character which they have contributed during the past twenty-five or thirty years, would you have brought them here as evidence against me?

Mr. Maguire—Do you think that you can whitewash your own character by attacking the Clandillons and throwing mud upon them?—I have never attacked them, nor have I thrown mud on them.

THE SONGS IN THE BOOK.

The witness was cross-examined in detail as to his references to several of the songs in the book, and with regard to a particular instance it was put to him that there was a suggestion that Mrs. Clandillon took an air from the Journal of the Folk Song Society. She said that she had been singing it in public for eighteen years.

The witness said that Miss Lucy Broadwood sent a copy to Mrs. Clandillon.

Mr. Justice Hanna asked who was Miss Lucy Broadwood, and what was her connection with Irish folk songs.

Witness—She is one of a distinguished family of musicians, now an elderly lady; her people were the Broadwood piano people. She was one of the founders and up to two years ago was editor of the journal of the Folk Song Society. She is also the author of numerous collections of English folk songs. She came here in the summer of 1906 and went to a district near Cappoquin, and collected a number of Irish airs, which were published in the journal of the Folk Song Society. She is one of the most distinguished living folk song experts.

The witness further said that he accepted Mrs. Clandillon's statement now that she did not take it from the journal of the Folk Song Society.

Mr. Maguire—Can you explain how it is that the Clandillons were singing that particular song (referring to a song in the book) before 1911, when you say that it was first published?—A prize was offered in 1911 at the Oireachtas for an original song, words and air. Mr. Clandillon submitted this song—I do not know when he composed it—and it got the first prize. It was published in the "Claidheamh Soluis" in July, 1911. The fact that it had been published anywhere is not stated in this book ("Londubh an Chairn").

Would it not have been fair to the Clandillons to have stated there, in connection with this song, that it was their own work and had obtained a prize, rather than convey to the public the impression that, at any rate, it might have been taken from the "Claidheamh Soluis"; do you think it was no part of the duty of a critic to point out the genuine authorship of this song and its source?—If I had given authors I should have referred to numerous cases where the authors were not mentioned in these notes (notes to "Londubh an Chairn"), because they were not known by the editors.

Do you think that in your review it was right and proper to suppress the fact that some of these particular items had been already written, printed and published by the Clandillons themselves?—As regards this particular song, there is no statement whatever in the notes that this song had been previously printed.

Why did not you in common decency make a note in the review that, although that song had been printed before, it was undoubtedly the work of the Clandillons? Are they not entitled to reproduce their own work?—Quite.

THE CARNEGIE TRUST.

Mr. Maguire asked if the witness had not stated on the previous day that in his belief the Carnegie Trust had been deceived.

The witness hotly objected to the use by counsel of the word "deceived," and said that he did not state that the Clandillons deceived anybody. His belief was that the Carnegie Trustees, being men of ordinary intelligence and understanding ordinary English, were under a misconception that these airs were substantially unpublished.

Mr. Justice Hanna—That is what you intended to convey?

Witness—Certainly; that is the point.

Replying to Mr. Maguire, he said that the Carnegie Trustees were not experts in folk music. He had explained his belief that the Carnegie Trust was under a misconception

You know that the Carnegie Trustees act under the advice of experts or committees?—I presume they do. I know they have refused to disclose the names of the people who advised them in the matter.

You say that the Carnegie Trustees and the Oxford University Press were under a misconception?—That is my honest belief.

The witness further said that the misconception arose, if it did arise, from the fact that the experts appointed by the Trust to consider the book before it was published may have formed, and then given, a wrong opinion of the contents and merits of the book.

Mr. Maguire—I suggest that the only reasonable conclusion that people reading your article could come to was that the people responsible for this misconception in the mind of the Carnegie Trust were the Clandillons, and no one else?—Emphatically no; every publisher has his readers for every class of work, and it is on the advice of experts in the last resource that the publishers act.

Mr. Justice Hanna—Mr. Maguire's question is that the ordinary man reading your last paragraph could come to no other conclusion than that you were imputing to the Clandillons the origin of the misconception that you allege the Carnegie Trustees were under. Do you agree that that is the meaning of your words or do you dissent?

Witness—I emphatically dissent.

THE CORRESPONDENCE.

Mr. Maguire (to witness)—Why did not you attack the experts of the Carnegie Trust and not the Clandillons?—Is that the province of a reviewer?

Is that the excuse for the attack, that the responsibility might be on someone else?—I make no attack.

You do not consider this review an attack?—No.

Have you and your legal advisers obtained every line of the correspondence that passed between the Clandillons and the Carnegie Trustees?—I presume so.

Mr. Fitzgerald—On an order for discovery from the Court.

Mr. Maguire (to witness)—Has it been examined minutely?—I presume so.

Has it been raked and ransacked?—Not by me; I have not even read it through once. He added that the names of the experts were not in the documents which had been disclosed.

Do you suggest that the Clandillons have suppressed the names of the experts?—Mr. Clandillon stated himself that he did not know them.

Being asked by Mr. Justice Hanna if he had read the correspondence, the witness said that he did not read it completely, but probably the greater part of it, and, in reply to a further question as to whether he found anything in it to justify an allegation that the Clandillons brought about a misconception, he said that there occurred to him a phrase about a real work of scholars.

Mr. Maguire—Did you find a single untrue thing in the correspondence under the hands of the Clandillons?—I am quite unable to tell you.

You think that is a fair answer?—It is my only answer.

You have been about nine years in this country?—Yes.

Do you not think that this country has treated you rather well?—You mean I have prospered in it?

Do you not think that you have done rather well in this country?—What do you mean?

Have you prospered?—Yes, thanks be to God.

In nine years this country has placed you in one of the most prominent and highly-paid positions in the whole country? It is one of the most prominent, but I am not sure whether it is one of the most highly-paid positions.

Your knowledge of the Irish language was one of the qualifications which obtained for you that position?—Yes, undoubtedly.

Do you not think that it is a little ungrateful of you to attack people like the Clandillons, who have been at this work for the last 25 or 30 years, and devoted to it the energies of their lives?—No, sir. I have prospered in this country. I feel that I am an Irishman returned to the land of his fathers, and I love this country terribly. I feel that my country has been humiliated by the publication of this book, and I still feel that very deeply indeed. That is one of the reasons I reviewed the book in the way I did.

A REVIEWER'S PROVINCE.

Mr. Justice Hanna—In connection with your own works, did you or anyone on your behalf ever apply to the Carnegie Trust for assistance?—Yes; I believe the Irish Folk Song Society of London did so.

Did they get it?—No.

Would you call "An Londubh" of 1904 a scholarly book?—No. It was merely a book of songs without notes.

What is your conception of your duty in reviewing that book towards authors and towards the public?—I consider that, in the case of a reviewer reviewing a book sent to a paper for publication and received by him from that paper to review it—I consider that he is bound to state his honest opinion without bias or malice of that book as a whole. It is not incumbent upon him to throw in a few words of praise in an otherwise unfavourable review. He is not necessarily unfair if, after having formed a totally unfavourable review of a book, he says so in no uncertain language, provided that he keeps within the bounds of ordinary journalistic literary decency in criticism. Further, I am of the opinion that it is not incumbent upon a literary or musical critic to survey the whole of a book. I hold that a critic is perfectly entitled to restrict his article to any particular branch of the book that he wishes.

Mr. Justice Hanna—Your view is that you are entitled to take one or two aspects of a work and write a review on the demerits of that, regardless of the merits of any other part?—My own position was that I had looked at this book in all its aspects, and had found them invariably bad in my honest opinion.

Is it not a common thing for reviewers to give the public some information as to who the authors are?—I would say not.

In respect of the application for assistance which was refused by the Carnegie Trust,

Mr. Fitzgerald said that the application was refused because the Trust considered that the work was the undertaking of such a well-known reprint that they did not think they should subscribe to it: they thought that it should be self-supporting.

MR. HERBERT HUGHES.

Mr. Herbert Hughes, examined for the defence by Mr. Fitzgerald, said that he was an Irishman, born in Belfast, and since 1911 he had acted as musical critic for the Daily Telegraph. He had made a study of Irish folk-songs, and was a one-time honorary organist at St. Peter's Catholic Church, Belfast. In 1901 he entered the Royal College of Music, London, and in 1903, while still a student there, he organised, with the late Francis J. Biggar, a harp festival in Belfast and an exhibition of old texts and instruments relating to Irish traditional music. In 1903 and 1904 he collected Irish folk-music in the County Donegal, and embodied the results of that collection in "Songs of Uladh" (Ulster), published in 1904. He was one of the original founders of the Irish Folk Songs Society and joint co-editor with Mrs. Milligan-Fox of its early Journals. He adjudicated at the Glens of Antrim Feis in 1909, and produced "Irish Country Songs," which had had a large sale. He reviewed "Londubh an Chairn," and had never met Mr. O'Sullivan before he himself published his review. He never saw Mr. O'Sullivan's review before his own was published.

Mr. Fitzgerald (quoting from the witness's review)—"After a careful perusal, it is not easy to say for what public the volume is intended. . . . A slight to the honourable traditions of Irish scholarship. . . ."

Do you still think that?—I do. The arrangement of the musical notation seems to me to be the work of unpractised hands, inefficiently done, and without ordinary musical scholarship. It was obvious to me that it was full of mistakes that a child in the early stages of elementary musical education would not make. In some instances it is rhythmical nonsense.

Questioned as to the origin of the song, "Eamonn an Chnuic" ("Ned of the Hill"), the ownership of which was claimed by Mrs. Clandillon, the witness said that this song was a very close variant of "Kitty Tyrrell." There was no essential difference between the airs.

Mr. O'Sullivan's review was, in his opinion, a fair criticism of "Londubh an Chairn."

THE CROSS-EXAMINATION.

In the course of replies to questions put by Mr. Geoghegan, in cross-examination, the witness said that he was not an Irish speaker, and in the present matter he only dealt with the music.

Do you suggest that the Irish words do not sing to the tunes in this book?—I have not made that statement.

Will you make that statement?—I will not. He further said that he was familiar with Irish folk music, but he had not said that he was an expert.

Being questioned as to some of the airs in the book, he said that in many cases they were variants more or less close.

With regard to Mr. O'Sullivan's review, the witness gave it as his opinion that it was not a criticism of persons, but of the book.

Mr. Geoghegan—Do you agree that the legitimate province of a reviewer is to review the book without regard to the author?—I would say so. I do not admit that the words are personal abuse.

In further evidence, he said, as to the non-acknowledgment of sources, that it might not have been done consciously. He did not see that the review imputed plagiarism.

Questions followed as to whether the Carnegie Trust had been placed under a misconception, and the witness said that he thought the Carnegie Trust people misled themselves. "In other words," he added, "I do not think their Expert Committee is an Expert Committee. I do not think it functions. I do not know their names."

Mr. Geoghegan—You are aware that they do not divulge the names of their musical adjudicators?

Witness—It would be much better if they did.

PROFESSOR BERGIN.

Professor Bergin, Ph.D., Litt.D., Professor of Old Irish in University College, Dublin, examined by Mr. Bewley, said that he had read the review that was complained of. He thought that it was a stiff—a severe—review. He had heard of cases where books had been withdrawn in consequence of such reviews.

Mr. Bewley—Is it in the interests of scholarship and science that severe reviews should be published?—Absolutely.

Proceeding, the witness said that the use of the word "slovenly" in the review struck him as not being exaggerated. He had used that word himself in reviews.

What did "broadcasting" convey to your mind?—The ordinary meaning of the word.

Was it a sneer at Mr. Clandillon's profession?—No.

The witness mentioned that he had been associated with Mr. Clandillon years ago in connection with the study of Irish, and he had the kindest recollections of that association.

Do you consider that Mr. Clandillon is a competent person to write a scholarly book?—I do not associate scholarship with Mr. Clandillon.

You think that it was a fair basis to review this book on—that it had been published as a scholarly work?—Yes.

Is it a scholarly work in any way?—No.

Following evidence as to details in the production of the book,

Mr. Bewley said: One of the complaints in reference to the book is that accents are to a great extent omitted?

Witness—I would call that untidy. If "slovenly" is considered impolite, I consider it untidy.

The further hearing was adjourned until to-day.

Mr. Martin Maguire, K.C.; Mr. James Geoghegan, K.C., and Mr. George Moonan (instructed by Mr. C. J. Murray, LL.D.) appeared for the plaintiffs; Mr. J. M. Fitz-Gerald, K.C.; Mr. C. Lavery, K.C., and Mr. C. A. Maguire (instructed by Messrs. A. Cox and Co.) for Mr. O'Sullivan; and Mr. Bewley, K.C., and Mr. Marnan (instructed by Messrs. A. Cox and Co.) for Mr. Russell and the Irish Statesman Publishing Co.

LABOURERS' COTTAGES SCHEME.

The hearing was resumed of the appeal by the plaintiff in the case of Arthur G. Ringwood, farmer, of Carduff, Blanchardstown, Co. Dublin, against the North Dublin R.D.C. from an order made in the High Court by Mr. Justice Sullivan and Mr. Justice Hanna, on appeal from an order made by the late Circuit Judge Dromgoole, relating to a scheme for the erection of labourers' cottages on the plaintiff's lands. The High Court order appealed from varied and amended Judge Dromgoole's order of 11th June, 1926, in some respects, directing that the respondents, the Rural District Council, should be at liberty to enter judgment against the plaintiff and appellant, Mr. Ringwood, for their costs of the appeal, each party to abide their own costs of the proceedings in the Circuit Court, and the respondents undertaking to take no steps to acquire the sites or plots on the plaintiff's lands or to erect cottages thereon unless and until the pump which they proposed to sink on the lands, west of the sites of the cottages to be erected, had been sunk and was in effective working condition for providing a proper supply of water.

Mr. Denning, K.C., and Mr. M. Walker (instructed by Messrs. Baker, Ringwood and Gordon) appeared for the appellant, Mr. Ringwood; and Mr. Brereton Barry (instructed by Mr. L. J. O'Neill) for the respondents, the North Dublin R.D.C.

The appellant's case having been put before the Court by Mr. Denning, K.C., and Mr. Walker the previous day,

Mr. Brereton Barry presented the case for the respondents, explaining at length the various steps and proceedings taken with respect to the scheme.

Mr. Denning, K.C., replying, raised the point about the right of agricultural labourers to have an extension made to the plots allotted to them under certain circumstances.

The Court reserved judgment.

FUNERAL OF MR. W. J. BASTOW.

Much regret has been expressed by a large circle of friends at the sudden death of Mr. W. J. Bastow, late Valuer on the staff of the General Valuation Office, which occurred on Monday morning. STEADY!

In these days the noise and excitement of life are greater than ever. Whether you realise it or not, all this throws a great strain on your nerves. If sudden noises make you "jumpy," if little things upset you, if you find life a burden, you may be sure that your nerves are not in perfect order. But there is no need to worry. Your nerves can be easily strengthened by taking a short course of Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites "Fellows." This is not a mere stimulant but a reconstructive tonic. Doctors have prescribed "Fellows" for over sixty years and surely this should warrant your confidence.

GREAT FINISH FOR THE SEFTON.

SKRUN PRINCE WINS ON THE POST.

A CONSISTENT SPRINTER.

From Our Travelling Correspondent.

LIVERPOOL, Wednesday Night.

The fog had lifted when racing began this afternoon, and instead of a view of nothing but the chair fence, as we had yesterday, it was possible to see the horses, though a little indistinctly, as they were making the canal turn in the race for the Grand Sefton. It is doubtful whether there has been a finer finish for this steeplechase than that of this afternoon; for Skrun Prince only won it in the last few strides by a head and a head from May King and Rampant, Ballyhanwood being the only other to finish out of a field of sixteen runners.

There may have been many higher-class fields for the race, but the finish made up for everything that was lacking in this respect. There were some ragged lots in the party, and easily the best-looking horse that went out of the paddock was May King, who started favourite, with Skrun Prince and Ruddyman his nearest market rivals.

FIRST FENCE, FIRST FALL.

The grief began quickly, for at the very first fence Fairfield, usually one of the safest of Liverpool jumpers, came down with Uncle Ben, a horse recently sold out of Cunningham's Youghal stable to Mr. H. B. Brandt, who keeps a horse or two at his own place in Sussex. The next to go was Castletown, and then Crockanoir came a purler at the chair fence.

May King led over the water from Gay Dog and The Gosling. At Bechers the field had been reduced by half. Then the Grand National winner, Tipperary Tim, was pulled up. Coming to the canal turn The Gosling may have gone slightly in front of May King, but at Valentine's he was carried out by Gay Dog. Coming to the last open ditch Great Care seemed to have remembered that he fell there last year; for he stopped dead and refused point blank to approach it.

This reduced the field to four, with Skrun Prince the worst-placed of the lot. May King was jumping well, and Cullinan was riding a beautiful race on him, keeping him just a little in front and steering well clear of all the trouble. He did not meet the last fence quite right, and Rampant, whom Owen Anthony trains for his brother, Colonel Anthony, landed in front of him, Skrun Prince being then a few lengths in the rear, but going well.

A GREAT FINISH.

On the flat May King closed again with Rampant, but a bump from the latter did not do him any good. The pair were fighting out a strenuous finish, when Skrun Prince, amid great excitement, just got up on the outside to win a great race on the post.

Skrun Prince is a real good stamp of a Liverpool horse, who is by The Raft (a stallion who won many races in England and then sired several winners while in the ownership of Mr. Pat. Rogers) from Daisy, the dam of a winner or two, and I believe that he was sold to come to England by Mr. Cargill, of Trim. Mr. Johnny Harper, the York dealer, had him for a time, and won with him a little race at the Moore Hunt meeting, but he was then beaten by Old Mask On, who gave him 7lb., and finished in front of him.

Then he passed into the ownership of Sir Frederick Freake, the popular international polo player of other days, and went to the stable of Rimell at Kinnersley, in Worcestershire, where he still remains.

A PROMISING START.

His antecedents have not been distinguished, and yesterday's effort was a far, far bigger thing than he had ever done. He ran here in the name and colours of Colonel P. D. Stewart, an ex-cavalry officer, who lives in Warwickshire, and used until recently to ride some jumpers of his own, which Mr. Fred Withington trained for him. It was the first time he had ever seen a Liverpool fence, and he acquitted himself so well that one day we may be thinking of his prospects in the Grand National. All the same I think that May King was slightly unlucky to have lost.

Owen Anthony, who was third with Rampant, won the Abbeystead Three-Year-Old Hurdle with Clear Cash, a promising young horse, whom Sir John Grey owns. This son of Dibs had made a very good impression at Manchester last week by winning a similar event in very fast time, and he started favourite here, but he had not much to spare in the market from Lady Helen McCalmont's recent purchase, Wondrous, whom Mr. Hubert Hartigan had brought from Ireland.

Ted Leader rode Wondrous, and he seemed to make a lot of use of him, for he was going on well past Clear Cash, who made the running at half-way. Between the last two hurdles he was losing ground, and was beaten, and Clear Cash went on to be challenged on the flat by the Scottish horse, Swashbuckler. The latter headed him, and his jockey, Tannock, crossed right in front of the favourite, so palpable a cross that there would probably have been an objection had he finished first.

Pellerin, however, switched Clear Cash to the outside, and got up again to win cleverly by half a length, Gladsmuir, from Mr. Hastings' stable, finishing third in front of Wondrous, with the Sandown winner, Sandro, fifth. These five had the race to themselves all the way.

CAME FROM IRELAND.

The jumping events were, of course, the best of the day; but the flat racing was interesting all the way through. Orthodoxos and Flying Blood came from Ireland to run for the Palatine Selling Plate. Neither was well away, and it would appear that the standing start here may militate against the chances of Irish horses who come to run in England and have not been used to it. Orthodoxos finished last, and Flying Blood was second, beaten two lengths by Stolen Joy. The winner made 340 guineas and Flying Blood was sold to remain in England for 100 guineas.

Tag End ran a sour race in the Croxteth Handicap, where he had every chance and was heavily gambled on. He was well enough away, but a furlong from home he had had enough, and Oak Ridge went on. He, however, hung a little, and only won by a short head and a head from Pobieda and Moya, with Grand Glacier fourth. On merit, Oak Ridge may now justly be classified as about the best and most consistent sprinter in training. Mr. Frank Cundell gave only £80 for him last year, when he seemed to be broken down beyond repair. Take a Glass was left entirely.

Mr. J. B. Joel had a little consolation for the defeat of Tag End when old Obvious, a moderate plater last year, showed his liking for the course again by winning the Ford High-Weight Handicap by a neck from Pilgrim's Belle and a moderate field of horses, in which the Irish colt, Flying Arab, finished third.

LONDON CUP WINNER AGAIN.

Lord Derby drew a blank on this second day also, for in the Apprentices' Plate his Lamlash was beaten a length and a half by Frank Bare, who had won the London Cup at Alexandra Park for Wootton last Saturday.

The Grosvenor Cup is the chief event to-morrow, and on this easy course another chance may be given to the Cambridgeshire failure, SUNNY TRACE. There will be a runner from Ireland in the Rous Memorial Nursery, Ennis Bridge, whose form in his own country reads to be good. The Niche and Solicitude colt were respectively second and third to Drift at Newmarket last week, and the former has a 5lb. advantage in the weights. SOLICITUDE COLT will, however, this time have the services of Richards instead of Richardson, and this may turn the scale in his favour. KENTISH PLOVER should win the Duchy Stakes.

BETTING IN IRELAND.

BOARD OF MANAGEMENT.

The Board of Management for Racecourse Betting in Ireland, the title by which the Totalisator Committee will in future be known, held its first meeting on Tuesday last at the Turf Club Offices, Dublin, when there were present Captain Charles Moore, Major Shirley, Senator General Sir Bryan Mahon, Sir Walter Nugent, Major Gerrard, Mr. Justice Wylie, Senator J. J. Parkinson, Mr. A. D. Comyn, Mr. Albert Lowry, and Mr. Martin McDonogh.

Captain Moore, the Senior Steward of the Turf Club, and Mr. Justice Wylie were unanimously elected chairman and vice-chairman, respectively.

A sub-committee, consisting of Captain Moore, Mr. Justice Wylie, Mr. M. McDonogh and Senator Parkinson, was appointed to interview the Minister for Finance to place before him the views of the Board as discussed at the meeting; and, further, to inform him that the Board had decided to obtain all possible information from every source as regards the most suitable type of machine for totalisator betting.

Asked for the names of the two nominees of the breeding-owning-training interests as a group, Mr. Harold Clarke, the Secretary to the Turf Club, informed a Press representative that the names of Senators Bennett and J. J. Parkinson and Mr. Albert Lowry had been forwarded to the club, and that they had been invited to attend the meeting.

SPORTING GOSSIP

Improved Fence at Liverpool.

There was only one "casualty" in connection with the Grand Sefton Steeplechase at Liverpool yesterday, T. McCarthy sustaining slight concussion when Uncle Ben came down at the first fence. The alterations that have been made to the notorious fence at the canal turn, which has been the cause of so much grief in past Grand Nationals, were unanimously approved by the more experienced jockeys who rode in the race. It is now a perfectly plain fence, the ditch having been filled in; but the left turn which has to be taken and the short run to the next obstacle will still always be liable to create some trouble, and did so yesterday after the fence had been jumped.

Change of Quarters.

LEINSTER BRANCH I.H.U.

At the monthly meeting of the Leinster Branch I.H.U.—Mr. W. F. M'Donnell in the chair—it was decided to play the Trials on December 12th and January 9th, and the Branch dinner was fixed for December 12th.

Various economies were discussed, and it was decided to look for individual club support in the matter of hire of grounds and in the substitution of a club shield, instead of medals, for League winners.

A recommendation was forwarded to the Selection Committee suggesting that cross-Channel players should not be eligible for Interprovincial teams unless they play in the preliminary trials.

The claim made by Naas for points against Dublin University II. was held over, and the clubs were requested to discuss the matter anew.

Newcomes.—Practice at Temple Hill at 3.45 to-day.

AVOCA SCHOOL v. ST. GERARD'S SCHOOL.—At Bray yesterday Avoca School defeated St. Gerard's School by three goals to two. Fry, Browne and Mouritz were the scorers for Avoca, and Sandys and O'Reilly for the home team

HUNTING.

KILDARE HOUNDS.

The opening meet at Johnstown Inn on 30th did not result in much more than cub-hunting in demesnes. Kerdiffstown and Palmerstown were blank, but foxes were found at Bishopscourt, and we had a small ring on the Dublin road side of the place with one of them. A litter at Cullen's Wood was initiated into the joys of the chase in the evening, and given a good dusting without any definite result before going home.

The time honoured custom of meeting at Dunlavin on the first Thursday of the season was kept up on the 1st inst, and a start was made with Cryhelp, the starting point of many a famous hunt. Plenty of foxes were found here on Thursday, and hounds eventually settled on to one, probably a cub, which ran a twisting line in the Dunlavin direction. There was not much scent, and he was unaccounted for in the neighbourhood of Friar's Hill. Copelands was then tried, and a line, probably of one of the Cryhelp foxes, was owned to, but it was too cold and we went on to Tynte Park, where legions of foxes were at once on foot. They were for the most part an uneducated lot, however, and though at least a brace did go away hounds always seemed glued to others, a brace of which laid down their lives "pour encourager les autres," and we moved on to Glenduff. Hounds were not long in getting one away from this good covert on the Ballyhook side, but on reaching the road half-way up the hill he turned back left-handed, running through the heavy bottoms. Leaving the covert just on the same hand he ran over Whitestown Hill, pointing for Tynte Park. Bearing to the left in the low ground between Tynte Park and Whitestown, and again to the left, he got back to the starting-point, from which he was again evicted, and it was getting late when hounds were held up on the top of Ballyhook Hill. This was a busy day, much enjoyed by not a large field, and Miss Tynte dispensed the proverbial Tynte Park hospitality on the way home.

On Saturday last at Courtown Major Aylmer had plenty of "jumping powder" for those who needed it after listening to his account of the care he had been taking of his fences during the recess and he had plenty of foxes too. But they, too, were probably suffering from neglected education, and after dispersing them round the woods we marked one to ground half-way to Laragh, and moved on to draw the latter covert. Hounds were soon rattling a fox round the privit with great cry, and he went away towards Laragh House. Turning right-handed he ran down to the screens and then back, left-handed, the way he had come, to the covert; out again over the road pointing for Courtown, and lefthanded back to Laragh screens, where he was unaccounted for.

Ballycaghan was then drawn, where, despite two visits during cub-hunting, foxes defied all efforts of hounds and the field for a very long time. Persistence was rewarded, however, and a fox was eventually holloaed away at the Cappagh end. Bearing left he took us by Grange Gate, just on the left, over the road, and on about half-way to Cooltrim, when hares, stock in the field, and the shades of night put an end to a most enjoyable day. This is the right line from Ballycaghan and augurs well for the future.

CHANGE OF MEET.

These hounds will meet at Kildare on Monday next, and not on Tuesday as originally arranged. The change has been made owing to the Curragh races taking place on the latter date.

WEXFORD HOUNDS.

The Wexford Hounds opened the season at Templeshelin. A feeling of pleasure and satisfaction animated the large field present when Major M. L. Lakin, who had hunted the pack from 1912 to 1927, arrived; he received a warm welcome on his return to again carry the horn. The first draw was Carrig Moss Hill, and another pleasing incident occurred here, where a number of covert owners had assembled to welcome the Master on his return to Ireland.

A fox was soon on foot on the north side of the hill, but, with the cold north wind, scent was bad and hounds were unable to force him into the open. Eventually he was marked in a rabbit burrow, and left. French's gorse was blank, but a fox was found at once in Knockreigh bogs, and left at the Adamstown end with hounds on his brush. Unfortunately, he was headed by a terrier and pulled down after going a few fields. Cleary's gorse was next tried, and a fox was viewed away. Hounds hunted slowly towards Ballagh, where scent failed.

Amongst those out were:—Major M. L. Lakin, Master; Mrs. Lakin, Mr. T. W. Jefferies, Mrs. Jefferies, Mr. J. B. Boyd, Miss Doyle, Captain Forbes, Mr. T. A. Colfer and Mrs. Colfer, Captain Ferrier Kerr, Miss Thompson, Miss Howlett, Mr. J. Fletcher, Mrs. Fletcher, Mr. A. P. Doyle, Mr. A. M. Gibbon, Mrs. Gibbon, Mr. P. Furlong, Dr. E. J. Walsh, Mr. T. Elmes, Mr. J. A. Doyle, Dr. M. Walsh, Miss Hartrick, Miss Deane, Mrs. Boyce, Captain Leslie Parker and Mrs. Parker, Mr. A. Furlong, Mr. P. Murphy, etc.

BRAY HARRIERS.

In our account of the opening meet of the Bray Harriers last Saturday it was, through inadvertence, stated that Mr. E. B. Peyton and Mr. W. Twomey were now Joint Masters. As a matter of fact, Mr. Peyton is in sole command, and this is his fifth season in office, he having succeeded Mr. Twomey, who is still a keen supporter of the pack.

A "cap" will be taken in aid of the Earl Haig Fund on Saturday next at the meet of the Bray Harriers at the Grand Hotel, Greystones.

MUSKERRY HOUNDS.

The opening meet of the Muskerry Foxhounds took place at St. Ann's, near Blarney, Co. Cork, yesterday. The sport was very enjoyable, and, as foxes appear plentiful, there are prospects of a good season. Amongst those out were:—The Master, Captain Hornby, and Mrs. Hornby; Major Mahony (hon. secretary) and Mrs. Mahony, Mr. T. G. Wallis, Colonel Purvis, Mrs. Purvis, Colonel Ryan, Mr. Fitzjames Murphy, Miss Murphy, Mr. N. Mahony, etc.

NEWMAN V. DAVIS.

Newman has now established a commanding lead over Davis in their time limit match at Thurston's, London. Yesterday afternoon he scored 922 against the champion's 551, and at the interval was 2,887 in front. A feature of the session was a break of 878 by Newman, who played brilliantly at the top-end of the table, and had 33 and 38 consecutive cannons in the innings. He failed at a kiss cannon off the cushion when the balls had covered. Newman also had a run of 96, while Davis contributed 99, 386 and 117 (unfinished). Interval scores—Newman, 39,308; Davis (in play), 36,421.

Although Davis showed much improvement in the evening session, he was again outpointed by the ex-champion, who scored 763 against 733. Davis took his unfinished break to 183 at the outset, and later he made 217, 209, and 130, while Newman recorded runs of 180, 165, and 125 (unfinished). Closing scores:—Newman (in play), 40,071; Davis, 37,154.

TRINITY SECOND'S BIG SCORE.

27 POINTS TO 8 AGAINST LONGFORD.

Dublin University second team visited Longford yesterday, and won easily by three goals and four tries to one goal and one penalty goal. The superior speed and skill of Trinity were too much for the Longford team, who fell away in the second half, in which Trinity scored 16 points. McNeilly (2), McNeice (2), Taylor, Tyndall and Robinson scored for Trinity, McNeilly converting two and McD. Stewart one try. M. Farrell scored for Longford, Callanan converting. Callanan kicked a penalty goal for Longford. Cussen and Lyburn combined well at half-back for Trinity, and originated most of the scoring movements. Result:—

Dublin University 2nd—3 goals 4 tries (27 points).
Longford—1 goal 1 penalty goal (2 points).

ENNISKILLEN DEFEAT SLIGO.

The Enniskillen Rugby XV. met Sligo yesterday afternoon at Enniskillen. The game was one-sided. Enniskillen had the game to themselves, and the Sligo backs showed lack of knowledge of the game. ASSOCIATION.

INTER-LEAGUE MATCH.

FOOTBALL LEAGUE (2) V. SCOTTISH LEAGUE (1).

The thirty-fourth meeting of the Football League and the Scottish League on the ground of the Aston Villa Club at Birmingham, before 25,000 spectators, ended in a victory for the home team by two goals to one—a victory which in no way flattered them. Thus the Scottish representatives failed to end their long run of non-success in this series, their last win having been gained in the year before the war.

The issue really turned on the Englishmen's superiority at half-back, where Edwards, in particular, played a highly creditable game, and the Scottish selectors who scrapped the half-backs who helped the Scottish League to beat the Irish League so easily certainly had no reason to be enthusiastic about the form of the men they introduced in this department. Hine and Dean scored for the English League in the first half, and a quarter of an hour from the end Archibald scored for the visitors.

FREE STATE COUNCIL MEETING.

At a meeting of the Council of the Free State F.A. last night the following draw was made for the Free State Qualifying Cup, 2nd round:—

Leinster District—Mullingar Town v. Glasnevin. Byes—Edenville, St. Mary's United, and Richmond United.

Munster District—Fermoy v. Cobh Ramblers or Cork Celtic; Barrackton United v. Cahir Park.

Matches to be played on or before November 18.

THIRD ROUND.

Leinster District—St. Mary's United v. Richmond United; Mullingar Town or Glasnevin v. Edenville.

Munster District—Barrackton United or Cahir Park v. Fermoy or Cobh Ramblers or Cork Celtic.

Matches to be played on or before December 2.

Permission was granted for a match on Christmas Day between teams representing North and South Dublin, the proceeds to go to the St. Vincent de Paul Society.

The objection lodged by the Leinster League against the F.S. Junior Association practice of calling on their First Division players for representative matches was upheld.

The deplorable conditions under which Juniors play in Phœnix Park was discussed, and the Council decided to move in the matter.

ENGLAND XI. V. WALES.

The following team was selected yesterday to represent England against Wales, at Swansea, on November 17th:—Hacking (Oldham Athletic), goal; Cooper (Derby County) and Blenkinsopp (Sheffield Wednesday), backs; Edwards (Leeds United), Hart (Leeds United) and Campbell (Blackburn Rovers), half-backs; Hulme (Arsenal), Hine (Leicester City), Dean (Everton), Bradford (Birmingham), and Ruffell (West Ham United), forwards.

Reserves to travel—Kean (Bolton Wanderers) and Carter (West Bromwich Albion)

Referee—W. Bell (Scotland).

The only change from the side which beat Ireland at Everton on October 22nd is Hart for Barrett (West Ham United) at centre half-back.

RED FLAG IN DUBLIN.

COMMUNISTS' VIEWS ON MACHINERY.

Under the auspices of the James Connolly Workers' Club, a public meeting was held in the Rotunda, Dublin, last night, in celebration of the eleventh anniversary of the Russian Soviet Revolution. Red flags decorated the stage, and the table in front of the speakers was also draped with red flags. The proceedings opened with the singing of the "Internationale."

Mr. Seumas McGowan said that the blockade of Russia resulted in the death from famine of ten million men, women and children, between 1921 and 1923. The increased use of machinery in countries outside Russia—and he would give the Shannon scheme as one instance—would eventually result in many men and women being thrown out on the streets to die of hunger, unless "the people take the earth, own it and hold it. We can watch our own Dail until our eyes grow dim; and it does not matter whether you are a Republican, Cumann na nGaedheal, British Army man, Volunteer, Citizen Army man or any other Army man, as long as you are a worker you will get nothing."

Madame Gonne McBride said that the Russian Revolution was a victory for the workers of the world.

Mr. Patrick Quinlan said that in the event of a war between America and England—which was quite possible—they should not accept 6d. or 1s. a day to become cannon fodder; but they should throw up the barricades in Dublin and wipe out the present ruling classes.

NEXT SATURDAY'S DANCE AT THE PLAZA.

On Saturday night next the Imperial Tobacco Company Rugby Football Club will hold its annual dance in the Plaza Ballroom, Dublin, between 8 and 12 p.m. Pete Lowe's Dance Orchestra will provide the music, and the special features of the night will include demonstrations of the slow waltz, fox-trot, and tango by Brian (the world's tango champion) and his partner, and "La Grande Revuette Cie" by Dolly Montford.

It is better that a child should be brought up so as to be able to quote Dr. Johnson wrong than so as to be able to quote even Mr. Bernard Shaw right.—Mr. Robert Lynd.

COURSING.

THE BELSIZE CUP.

A LOCAL VICTORY.

We had an exciting wind-up to the Belsize Cup meeting at Higginstown yesterday, all the fancied ones going down, and victory being achieved by an outsider in the locally nominated Windgap, which is owned by Mr. Spellman, of Gort.

A remarkable circumstance connected with the success of Windgap was that, although he had six stakes to his credit and had lost only two courses, he should have been quoted at 40 to 1 in the long odds betting, even though Figaro, War Debt and Hidden Pride were among the entry. He, however, never left the issue in the least doubt; as a matter of fact, he was the only one who was running on at the finish, and on this form he should figure prominently in the Irish Cup, for which he is to be nominated by Mr. Thomas Taylor, of Ballinasloe, who bred the sire, the latter of which never ran in public, being too much on the small side.

The coursing, particularly in the Cup, was again excellent; but the feature was the overthrow of the favourite, Figaro, whose course with War Debt, which was defending the Cup for Mr. Shaw, led to a difference of opinion. Something went amiss with the slips, and Figaro was badly hung up, and before he joined in the course War Debt had used the hare a couple of times. From that point, however, Figaro was clearly the cleverer worker, and when the judge decided for him the dog had plenty in hand.

Many thought that a more equitable decision would have been the sending of the pair back to slips; but the judge could not possibly have overlooked the handicap under which Figaro laboured from slips, and, with so much working after they joined, he would not, under any pretext, have been justified in depriving Figaro of the course. Very likely War Debt would have led from a level slip, for he went with a rare bat on the way up; but the decision, according to the principles of judging, was quite sound.

Figaro, however, was done with; for he was picked up lame, and was lame when he went to slips the fourth time with Windgap, from which he received a good dressing, being led by at least two lengths and well outcounted in a short, merry spin. Connaught Leader showed good pace against Gallant Countryman, but he did not run on, and, putting little or no fire into his fourth essay against Hidden Pride, he was led a couple of lengths. The deciding course provided another surprise when Windgap forged up for a two lengths lead and drove the hare to the right for the Kildare bitch to dash in and spoil her chance by using her teeth.

The Trial Stakes were won by Town Hall. It was an extremely popular victory for Mrs. Foley, whose youngster showed that he possesses good puppy pace. Indeed, there will not be many faster ones at Clonmel in the Breeders' Stake; nor is he a dunce at running a good hare. Camp Chief, which he beat in the deciding-course, is also a useful type of puppy.

It was a first-class meeting, extremely well run by the Westmeath United Club, which can justly claim to have placed their Cup fixture in the forefront of park meetings.

LEITRIM RAIDS AND ARRESTS.

ALLEGATIONS AGAINST CIVIC GUARDS.

In Dail Eireann yesterday,

Mr. SEAN LEMASS (F.F., Dublin S.) asked about a visit by Civic Guards to the house of Thomas Shanley, Cloonagh, Dromod, County Leitrim, on October 15th, when they warned him and threatened him with violence.

Mr. FitzGERALD-KENNEY, Minister for Justice, said that he had received a report on the matter, and he found that Mr. Shanley did receive a visit from a detective officer on the evening of October 15th. The officer was engaged in making certain inquiries about the peace of the district. There was no foundation for the allegation that Mr. Shanley was threatened in any way.

Mr. LEMASS asked if the Minister would give the source of his information that Mr. Shanley was not beaten by the police officer.

Mr. FitzGERALD-KENNEY said that he had received his information from the Guards, and when the matter was investigated the officer was refused any information by any of the inmates of the house.

Mr. LEMASS—Am I to understand that your only information is the statement of the Guards?

Mr. FitzGERALD-KENNEY—What other information does the deputy think I ought to have? Considering that these people refused to give any information, I am convinced that, if they had any real, solid complaint to make, they would have made it.

"BEATEN IN BARRACKS" CHARGE.

Mr. LEMASS further asked the Minister whether he was aware that Sean O'Farrell, ex-T.D., Dromod, County Leitrim, was arrested by members of the Civic Guard on October 15th and taken to the local barracks, where, it was alleged, he was assaulted and seriously beaten; and if the Minister would state the charge on which Mr. O'Farrell was arrested.

Mr. FitzGERALD KENNEY said that he had received a report about this matter, and he found that Mr. OFarrell attracted the attention of a detective officer, and in the light of other information, the detective officer, in the discharge of his duty, apprehended Mr. O'Farrell, and brought him to the local police barrack. O'Farrell was searched and questioned as to his movements, and was then set at liberty. He was informed that there was no ground for the allegation that O'Farrell was assaulted or seriously beaten.

On the motion for the adjournment, Mr. Lemass again raised the question of the raid on the house of Mr. Shanley. The reply given by the Minister, he suggested, bore, on the face of it, evidence of the guilt of the Civic Guards. Detective Officer McCartney struck Mr. Sean O'Farrell with his fist on the face, and followed that up by giving him a severe beating in the barrack. After an hour and a quarter, during which time he was continuously assaulted, Mr. O'Farrell was turned out on the road, with a threat that some night or other his bullet-riddled body would be found on the roadside, and that every time he met the detective on the road he would kick him home again.

NO INFORMATION FOR POLICE.

Mr. FitzGERALD-KENNEY, who had barely five minutes to reply, said that the system of making charges and not giving opportunity to reply was not playing the game. The report he had received on this matter of Mr. Shanley was not from the detective officer concerned, but from a superior officer, who had gone into the entire matter. He would very much like to know why Mr. Shanley or his people would not give information to the officer investigating the question, while they would go to the trouble, personally or by an intermediary, to give the particulars to Mr. Lemass.

The alleged assault on O'Farrell had happened in a barrack where there were other police, and the man, if molested, or if he had a criminal charge to make against the Guard, had the Courts of the country open to him.

COURTS NOT RECOGNISED.

Mr. BOLAND (F.F., Roscommon)—He will not recognise your Courts, and that is the reason he was beaten.

The MINISTER—Deputy Boland is a man of tremendous genius. He overwhelms himself. This man would not go into the Courts, but wants a police inquiry, at which everything will turn on his evidence.

Mr. DE VALERA—Does the Minister want to have these things continued all over the country?

The MINISTER—What things?

Mr. DE VALERA—These assaults by Guards on the people.

The MINISTER—When assaults are committed by the Guards on the people, and it is so proved, these Guards are punished.

Mr. DE VALERA—Does the Minister want to get the truth in this case, and is he prepared to set up an inquiry?

The MINISTER—I am not prepared to set up an inquiry until a prima facie case is put forward.

Mr. Boland and other Fianna Fail Deputies interjected angry remarks, and a tumult prevailed, when the DEPUTY SPEAKER said that it was three minutes after eleven o'clock, and declared the House adjourned.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT.

ARMED ROBBERY CHARGE.

SCENE IN A DUBLIN PUBLIC-HOUSE.

A young man, Matthew Kelly, of Royal Canal, Phibsborough, was charged with armed robbery in the publichouse, 19 Constitution Hill, Dublin, on the night of October 26 last.

Frances Gaffey, the foreman of the publichouse, in examination by Detective Sergeant Mooney, who, with Superintendent Ennis, had charge of the case, deposed to the arrival of a man with a revolver at the street door between 9 and 10 p.m. on October 26th. He heard the cry of "Hands Up" from the man with the gun, and another man jumped across the counter and took the best part of the money out of the cash register. The man with the gun kept witness covered while the money was being taken. Subsequently witness called to another assistant to go to the telephone when he saw the man behind the counter going to the desk. When they left the two men got into an unlighted motor car and drove away, witness shouting after them: "Robbers."

In cross-examination by Mr. P. Campbell, solicitor for the defence, the witness stated that at the time of the robbery there were a number of people in the shop, some of whom put up their hands.

The accused man was remanded in custody.

FRAUD CHARGE.

Robert Hamilton, of no fixed address, was charged by Detective Officers Gordon and O'Connor with attempting to obtain by fraud the sum of £5 from Mrs. James McNamee, Navan, by sending her a telegram purporting to be from her brother, James Ross, 26 Lower George's street, Kingstown, and requesting that the said sum be forwarded to him to 22 Aston's Quay, Dublin.

Detective Officer Gordon stated that he arrested the defendant from a description as he was coming out of St. Patrick's Park, Bride street.

The defendant was remanded for a week.

MOTOR DEALER'S OFFENCES.

(BEFORE MR. COLLINS.)

Guard Lumley (159B) summoned Robert Hamilton, 7 Molesworth place, Dublin, motor dealer, for using a general trade licence for a motor van, contrary to regulations. The defendant was fined £1. For not having the tax paid he was fined £5 10s.

Mr. Collins expressed satisfaction at the clear manner in which Guard Lumley had presented the case.

UNSTAMPED BOTTLES.

Edward Foxe, Inspector of Weights and Measures for the Pembroke Urban Council, summoned Thomas Long for having on his licensed premises, 48 Main street, Donnybrook, on October 4th, a half-pint bottle measure which was unstamped. He was also charged with having a pint measure which was not stamped.

Mr. Davy, solicitor, who defended, said that his client sent bottles out to customers, and when the messenger called for the empties he got some bottles which were not stamped. He would take steps to see that it did not occur again.

Mr. Collins imposed a fine of one shilling, with one guinea costs, in each case.

Mr. E. H. Burne, solicitor, appeared for the complainant.

BAD EGGS IN DUBLIN.

A NUMBER OF TRADERS FINED.

A number of Dublin traders were prosecuted under the Agricultural Produce (Eggs) Act for exposing for sale eggs unfit for human consumption.

Mrs. Costello, Inspectoress under the Free State Department of Agriculture, gave evidence in all the cases.

In evidence against Michael Brady, Upper Baggot street, Dublin, Mrs. Costello said that she had examined forty-five eggs in the shop, and found eleven unfit for human consumption. Some of them, when broken, had chickens in them. A fine of £5 was imposed.

For a similar offence C. Hogan, Aungier street, was fined £1. Mrs. Costello said that in this case she had examined fifty-six eggs, and found three unfit for human consumption.

Michael Burke, Cuffe street, was fined the same amount for a similar offence. Mrs. Costello stated that she had examined twenty-four eggs, two of which were unfit for human consumption.

A similar fine was imposed on Kevin Daly, Lower Camden street. Mrs. Costello admitted that she had only found three bad eggs, and for the defence Mr. J. Maguire pointed out that his client did an enormous trade in eggs, disposing of about 72,000 per week. He collected the eggs from the farmers in the country and brought them by motor to his shops in the city. Mr. Daly had three testers for testing his eggs, and on any complaint being made by a customer he replaced the bad eggs.

A fine of 5s. was imposed on Hugh Shortall, Elm Grove, it being shown that, out of twenty-seven eggs examined four were found to be bad.

Thomas Leonard, Upper Merrion street, was fined £1, it being shown that seven eggs were bad, out of seventy examined.

Elizabeth Lawler, Redmond's Hill, was fined 5s. for a similar offence. It was proved that three eggs were bad out of 120 examined.

Martin Murphy, South Great George's street, was fined 10s. for a similar offence. Three eggs were bad out of forty examined.

Mr. J. Ryan (Messrs. J. O'Connor and Co.) defended.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT (CRIMINAL) COURT.

A KINGSTOWN BURGLARY.

TWO MEN PUT BACK FOR SENTENCE.

(BEFORE JUDGE DAVITT.)

Edward Byrne and Christopher Curran were charged with breaking and entering the shop of Bridget Butler, 108-109 Patrick street, Kingstown, and stealing cigarettes and biscuits and four shillings on September 13th last. On a second count they were charged with attempting to break and enter the house of Mr. P. J. Murphy, Cove House, Sandycove, with intent to steal.

Miss May Campbell, assistant in Butler's shop, said that the communicating door between Nos. 108 and 109 was broken. The value of the goods stolen and the damage caused was £7 7s. 6d.

Richard Quaile, a shop assistant living in Dunleary, narrated his experience when going down the passage joining Mulgrave street and Patrick street on his way home between 11 and 11.30 o'clock on the night of September 12 last. As he was passing by he heard a whistle. Witness stopped for a moment, and as he did a man jumped across the wall into the laneway. In a few seconds another man followed across the wall. The two men were about twenty years of age, one tall and the other much smaller. The smaller of the two had something inside his jacket and in his pockets. Witness thought that the first man resembled the man Byrne. He could not swear to it, however. He did not identify the second man.

HOUSEKEEPER'S EVIDENCE.

Miss Alice Plunkett, housekeeper at "The Cove," gave evidence of an attempt that was made to enter the house on the night of October 18th last. She was in the kitchen when she heard a heavy thud in the passage below the halldoor step. Then she heard a moan, as of a person in pain. She was frightened, and on looking out of the drawingroom window saw a strange man walk past.

Inspector T. Clarke, Kingstown, gave evidence of going to Byrne's house, 59 Glasthule Buildings, and finding Byrne in bed with a cut on his forehead, blood on his nose, and a stiff and swollen neck. That was about four hours after the attempted housebreaking at "The Cove." Byrne denied all knowledge of the attempt to break into the house. He explained his injuries by saying that he was "kidding" on the beach with his friend, "Christy" Curran, when he overbalanced and fell over the ledge, bruising himself.

Inspector Clarke related how he had visited "The Cove" the day after the attempted burglary. He found marks on the side of the halldoor and on the ledge and skylight over the door. There was a bloodmark on the top step.

KINGSTOWN.

When cross-examining Inspector Clarke, Mr. Sherry, counsel for defence, alluded to Kingstown in a question.

A Juror—Pardon me, my lord. What is Kingstown? Where is it? This is a Dun Laoghaire case.

Judge Davitt (to Mr. Sherry)—Please keep to the legal name in future.

Mr. Sherry—I am sorry, my lord. It was a momentary aberration. I will use Dun Laoghaire, then.

A Juror—Thank you.

Mr. Sherry asked Judge Davitt for a direction in the case, as he held that there was no evidence against either of the accused men.

Judge Davitt said that he would give a direction in the case of Curran on the first count, but not on the second count. Byrne's case would have to go before the jury on the two counts.

Edward Byrne was then put in the witness box, and he repeated the story that he had imparted to Inspector Clarke. He denied all the charges.

Christopher Curran corroborated, and he also denied all the charges.

Both of the accused men were found guilty and put back for sentence.

TEARING DOWN OF UNION JACK.

JURY DISAGREE IN CASE OF FOUR DUBLIN MEN.

The four men who were found "mute of malice" by a jury last Tuesday—Patrick Stapleton, Patrick Fox, James Lyons and John Kinsella—were again arraigned on three charges of conspiracy, unlawful assembly and larceny.

A plea of "not guilty" was formally entered.

Three of the prisoners did not maintain their silence, and, when asked if they had anything to say, replied in the negative. Kinsella said nothing.

Mr. Carrigan, K.C., who prosecuted, said that the four men were concerned with the forcible entry of the Royal Insurance Company's offices, 45 Dame street, Dublin, and with stealing a flag. It was not a case for exaggeration at all. The simple fact of the case was that in the month of August there was a considerable influx of visitors to Dublin for the Horse Show and the Tailteann Games. There was a considerable amount of decoration and a big display of bunting on the buildings. Such a demonstration in the city could not have taken place without the approval of the citizens. There was nothing compulsory about it. The city was in a holiday mood, but also it was in a business-like mood.

The success of the display appeared to have annoyed and caused dissatisfaction to some people. They did not know who they were. The display towards the end was made the occasion of some not very serious but unpleasant incidents. There was some window-smashing and tearing down of flags. It was absurd for anybody to disguise the fact that these flags torn down were Union Jacks.

Now, this month was made the occasion for the assertion of their opinions by people who would not tolerate the opinions of other people. "Is this the liberty that the people of this country are going to endure in the future?" asked Mr. Carrigan.

THE RAID.

Evidence of the raid on the Royal Insurance Company's office was given by three of the company's staff—Albert Armstrong, J. Ferguson and Percy Clarke. Ferguson and Clarke identified Stapleton, Fox and Lyons as having taken part in the raid.

Guards Tierney, Mahon and Stewart, and Detective Officer T. Lane, who gave evidence of arrest and identification at last Tuesday's hearing of the case, repeated their evidence. Inspector O'Connell also repeated his evidence.

Judge Davitt said that it was a matter for regret that the law did not allow the District Justice to deal with cases of this kind, as they really wasted the time of jurors. There was room in this country for all kinds of opinions, and there was room for the opinion held by the four prisoners.

After about forty-five minutes the jury returned, and the foreman announced that they were unable to agree.

Judge Davitt asked what point worried them, and the foreman replied that the flags were not stolen.

Judge Davitt said that there was also a charge of unlawful assembly.

The jury again retired, but after a brief absence returned, when the foreman announced that they were unable to agree on any of the charges.

The jury were then discharged, and the prisoners were put back.

WOMAN SENTENCED.

Lavinia Peaken, who was convicted last Tuesday of receiving stolen property, was sentenced to four calendar months, without hard labour.

"Never before ... so great an advance in a single year"

Everywhere astonishing enthusiasm aroused by the performance of this

1929 BUICK

Almost a thousand people at Olympia booked trial runs in 10 days . . and even more through Buick dealers throughout the country. And everywhere the performance of the new Buick came as a sensational surprise—it represented an advance that no one could have anticipated in the time since the last Motor Show.

Among the first to try it was Mr. A. E. Salmon who judged it by the high standards set by the previous Buicks he has owned. Here is what he says:

"The first thrill I got was when I slipped the car into gear and manœuvred my way on to the road—the steering and the gear action were perfect. But the real sensation came when I started to pick up. I couldn't think why I was passing everything till I looked at the speedometer and saw that the 30 I'd guessed was actually 50. I slowed down after that, but when I'd gone through the worst of the traffic (sometimes at 2 m.p.h. in top) I put my foot on the accelerator—not coaxingly but wholeheartedly—and I got the biggest thrill that a car has ever given me. There was no gradual gathering of speed—the car just shot forward.

"The fascination of this car would have held me for hours and, incidentally, the adjustable driving seat would have made them hours of comfort. I'm sure that since the early days of motoring there has never before been so great an advance in a single year."

17% increase in power

Try this car for yourself. See what a difference the 17% increase in power makes to quick acceleration. No one can give you a complete impression in words. And remember that for all its extra power, the new Buick uses no more petrol.

The nearest dealer will arrange for you to try a Buick. Let him tell you about buying one by deferred payments on the General Motors plan. You can get a catalogue showing all models either from him or from General Motors Limited, The Hyde, Hendon, London, N.W.9.

THE MARKETING OF DAIRY PRODUCE.

POSITION OF IRISH CREAMERIES.

The marketing of dairy produce was under consideration at a private meeting of representatives of Irish Associated Creameries, Ltd., and others interested, which was held at Limerick, with the object of bringing all creameries in the Free State under the Association, with a view to marketing under one authority.

About twenty per cent. of the creameries are outside the Association, the reason advanced being that they prefer a free market, unfettered by regulations or restrictions.

It was stated at the meeting that if these societies did not voluntarily come in and work through the Associated Creameries marketing scheme, the Minister for Agriculture should be asked to draft a bill making it compulsory for them to sell through the existing central authority.

GHOST WITH A RIFLE.

A MILITARY SALUTE FOR CLARE VILLAGERS.

MILTOWN-MALBAY, Wednesday.

A ghost-like form is said to have been appearing in the neighbourhood of Bonevella (Mullagh) and Ahybridge (Mullagh) for some time past. People who declare that they have seen the ghostly visitor describe him as "a man of military appearance, wearing a trench coat and carrying what appears to be a rifle."

The apparition has made its appearance for the past few years during the month of November. A remarkable fact this year is that it is seen at Bonevella and Ahybridge at the same hour. Many people declare that they have purposely gone out to get into conversation with the unearthly visitor, but when they put a question to him he gives them a military salute and glides silently away. Others state that they have seen the apparition vanish on the open road.

The time at which the apparition appears is about 9 p.m., and it continues to walk till midnight, when it disappears.

One person stated—"I have seen the ghost twice, contrary to my wishes, and, as I had the uncanny experience of coming in contact with it, I endeavoured to get into conversation, and I asked him if anything was troubling him. Suddenly I got a salute, and the ghost vanished into thin air."

The women and children and a good many of the men will not venture out after sunset, fearing to come in contact with the ghost.

MAN DROWNED IN THE LIFFEY.

John Treacy, a dock labourer, of Peterson's lane, Sir John Rogerson's quay, Dublin, was drowned in the River Liffey at Hanover quay yesterday afternoon. He had been working at the quayside for some hours, and when his absence was noticed a search was instituted, and his body was recovered last night and taken to Sir Patrick Dun's Hospital, where an inquest will be held to-day.

It is not known how he entered the water.

QUICK RELIEF FROM INDIGESTION

No matter how badly or how long you have suffered, you can get speedy relief from indigestion by removing the cause of the trouble. Usually indigestion arises from excess stomach acid, which causes fermentation and creates gases that give intense pain. By neutralising this excess acid and soothing and healing the inflamed stomach lining, 'Bisurated' Magnesia not only gives instant relief, but builds up a strong healthy digestion. All chemists sell 'Bisurated' Magnesia in both powder and tablet form, and you cannot get anything more certain to end your stomach troubles.
